N. Y. BANDIT FIGHT IS BLOODIEST IN ANNALS

Starvation Adds Misery in Chinese Flood Area

TASK OF SUCCOR HOPELESSLY BEYOND ANY PRESENT AID

WUHAN AREA AFFECTED INCLUDES 3 LARGE CITIES IN CHINA

SEPARATED BY RIVERS WHICH JOIN TO MAKE MAIN COURSE OF YANGTZE

Hankow, China, Aug. 22—(U.P.)—One-third of the entire population of the flood devastated Wu-Han area has been killed, become hopelessly diseased, or is certain to starve, an official statement said today.

Wu-Han includes the three sister cities of Hankow, Wuchang and Hanyan, separated by rivers which join to make the main course of the Yangtze. The population of the cities alone is approximately a million and a half, with millions of others in surrounding agricultural districts.

Rescue ships plying the Yangtze between Hankow and the down river ports of Kiiukiang, Nanking and other cities are taking relief to thousands but the task of succor is hopelessly beyond present resources. Officials throughout China have been ordered to raise relief funds.

Many river steamships and native craft are transporting rice and evacuating refugees but so widespread is the area of devastation that their efforts can avail little. Well over 30,000,000 farmers are affected by the floods and between a third and a half this number is believed to have lost their homes already.

While the most spectacular disasters have occurred in the city areas, such as death of 1,000 in Wuchang today when a broken dyke allowed flood waters to crush a barracks refuge, the scenes along the river are almost beyond description.

Relief boats are finding families and whole villages clustered on tiny strips of land not yet flooded, and so far as possible they are packing up these survivors and at least transporting them to higher ground if it is not possible to take them farther. One of the difficulties of the situation is that most of the country downriver from Hankow is level.

Breaking of dikes in many instances destroyed entire villages within a matter of moments. Millions of the peasants' houses, made of mud with reeds woven through, have melted at the first impact of the waters and it is probable that even the sites of a large number of villages will not be found when the river goes down.

One of the worst features of a situation already complicated beyond understanding of those not on the scene is the fact that the flood will not drain off, at a large number of points, before cold weather sets in. This means that the agricultural lands will spend the winter under an ice blanket and spring planting next year will be impossible.

Washington, Aug. 22—(U.P.)—The commander of the Yangtze naval patrol reported today to the state department that the river level at Hankow was 53.4 feet and still was rising. He said a large portion of the wall around the property of the Standard Oil Co. of New York had collapsed.

34 PERSONS FACE PROSECUTION ON LIQUOR LAW VIOLATIONS

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 22. — (U.P.) — Thirty-four persons today faced prosecution on all liquor charges as the result of 30 raids by federal agents in six Minnesota counties.

Activities of the agents resulted in arrests in Morrison, Stearns, St. Louis, Itasca, Blue Earth and Faribault counties.

Those arrested in Stearns county included: Fred and William Oelschlager, St. Cloud; Peter Thielen, St. Cloud; David Kroska, farmer near Avon; Joseph Fahnorst, Albany.

In Bowlus, Morrison county, two 100 gallon stills, several hundred gallons of mash and 100 gallons of moonshine whisky were seized on the farm of John and Edward Czeck who were arrested.

On an adjoining farm a 50 gallon still was confiscated, it was said. In St. Louis county Joseph and Celia Bosich, alleged beer farm proprietors, were arrested.

LINDBERGHS FLIGHT IS BARRED BY THICK FOG

FORCED TO ALIGHT AT SHANA BAY IN ITARUP ISLAND

HAD BEEN ENROUTE TO NEMURO WHEN THEY ENCOUNTERED DENSE FOG

DISAPPOINTMENT AT DELAY IN ARRIVAL FAILS TO CHECK NEMURO'S ENTHUSIASM

Tokio, Aug. 22—(U.P.)—Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh alighted at Shana Bay, Itarup island, at 4:50 p. m. (1:50 a. m. cst). They were forced to halt their flight to Nemuro by dense fogs prevailing over the Pacific.

After they had been enroute slightly more than two hours, Mrs. Lindbergh radioed that they were northeast of Irurup island and making 95 miles per hour at aheight of 2,000 meters.

The Lindberghs took off from Muroton bay in the Kurile islands at 2:13 p. m. on the 400 mile flight and Mrs. Lindbergh then radioed that all was well.

From Nemuro, they will fly direct to Tokio, objective of their 7,000 mile trip from Washington, D. C.

The fliers had been expected Wednesday, but midway between Petropavalovsk, Siberia, and Nemuro, they encountered storm clouds which forced them back to seek a haven in the Kuriles. They landed at Ketoi Islet and for three nights and two days were forced to remain in that isolated section.

Motor trouble developed after the landing which had been made in dense fog among the volcanic islands. Yesterday the plane was towed to Muroton bay by a Japanese steamer. There it was dragged up on the beach and Col. Lindbergh made the necessary repairs.

Disappointment at the delay in arrival of the Lindberghs failed to lessen the enthusiasm of thousands of Japanese who gathered at Nemuro today to witness the landing and to cheer the fliers.

Flood lights were installed at the landing site Wednesday, in case the couple should arrive after dark, and they were left in place to facilitate landing today in case of need.

STARTLING AUCTION SALE NOTICE IS DECLARED "ERROR"

Camden, N. J., Aug. 22.—(U.P.)—Readers of auction sale notices were startled to see this posted under order of U. S. Marshal Frederick C. Schneider: "For sale—10,000 gallons of alcoholic fluids with vats, pumps, mixers, stills, etc., next Friday." Said U. S. Attorney Philip Forman, shown the notice: "It's an error."

BODY OF WOMAN SLAIN NEAR KENOSHA HAS BEEN IDENTIFIED

FINGERPRINTS REVEAL IT TO BE MRS. ANNE PATTERSON, 32, OF CHICAGO

MYSTERY OF WHY AND BY WHOM SHE WAS KILLED IS NOT CLEARED UP

Chicago, Aug. 22—(U.P.)—Police announced today that a gruesome and detailed story of the slaying of Mrs. Ann Patterson, Chicago whoopee woman found strangled Thursday near Silver Lake, Wis., had been told them by Mrs. Alma Ledbetter, one of three eyewitnesses, and that Mrs. Ledbetter had named a half-breed Indian known as "Blackie" as the killer.

Kenosha, Wis., Aug. 22(U.P.)—The body of a red haired woman who was attacked and beaten before she was thrown into a ditch has been identified as that of Mrs. Anne Patterson, 32, of Chicago.

The identification was established through comparison of finger prints of teh dead woman with others taken in 1926, when Mrs. Patterson was arrested here with another woman and three men. She and the other woman, Emily Smith, were released at that time, but the men, one of whom was her husband, Frank, were sent to prison for three years.

Determination of the woman's identity did not, however, clear up the mysteries of why and by whom Mrs. Patterson was killed.

Police of two states worked today on the mystery and in Chicago, Lieutenant John L. Sullivan of Albany Park station admitted to reporters that he knew who had committed the murder.

Sullivan refused, however, to name the man until the arrest was made. It was known Sullivan had two persons under arrest. They were thought to be a man and a woman. It was understood these two had confessed they were present when Mrs. Patterson was slain.

The story, as hinted by Lieut. Sullivan, was that Mrs. Patterson and three other persons were at a roadhouse drinking when an argument developed between her and her scort. The escort, it was said, choked her to death and the three then disposed of her body.

Dr. E. L. Miloslavich, Marquette university pathologist, expressed an opinion that Mrs. Patterson was attacked just after emerging from a swim and that her slayers then dressed her body, carried it some distance in an automobile and tossed it at the side of a road.

The clothes she wore, Miloslavich said, were not at all in keeping with the condition of her finger nails and hair, both of which indicated she was a woman who was particular about her appearance and who would not have been alive in the clothes she wore in death.

Indications were she struggled fiercely with her assailants.

One of the few clues in the case faded today when word came from Chicago and Leo Krogewski, 20, and Leo Shim had surrendered to police and given an explanation of an occurrence which had been considered important.

Officers had received reports that the night before Mrs. Patterson's body was found an automobile containing two men and a barefoot woman stopped at an oil station in Antioch. The station attendant said the woman was either dead or asleep and had her face turned toward the back seat cushion. Mrs. Patterson was barefoot when found.

Krogewski and Shim read of this report and told Chicago police they were the two men in the car. They said the woman with them was Jenny Biese, that she was asleep at the time, and that they could produce her on short notice if necessary to prove they had nothing to do with the crime.

Miss Keller was held by order of Circuit Judge George W. ONE BUSHEL WHEAT ADMISSION, FARMERS DAY, INDIANA FAIR

Indianapolis, Aug. 22.—(U.P.)—One bushel of wheat will admit either an adult or an automobile to the Indiana State Fair on Farmers' Day, Sept. 9, the fair board announced today.

Children under 12 will need only half a bushel in their sacks. Regular admission will be 50 cents for adults, 25 cents for children.

Canny farmers said the 50 cents saved would beat selling wheat at 40 cents. The wheat will be trucked to elevators and sold by the fair board.

NO FRIENDS OR ANY RELATIVES AT GANSGTER FUNERAL

HARRY (SLIM) MORRIS LAID TO REST IN LONELY GRAVE AT RED WING

MORBID CROWD ATTENDS, SALVATION ARMY IN CHARGE OF RITES

Red Wing, Minn., Aug. 22—(U.P.)—With no friends or relatives to pay respect, Harry (Slim) Morris, alias Jerry A. Camben, was buried today in a lonely grave in Oakland cemetery.

A morbid crowd attended the gangster's funeral. He was slain in a gun battle at Wacouta Monday. Captain H. J. Bollinger of the Salvation army was in charge of the simple services.

In a brief sermon, he said, "let him without sin cast the first stone while circumstantial evidence connects this man with most serious crimes, no court of the land has convicted him. God now is his only judge."

The body was taken to Oakland cemetery where a grave apart from the principal burying ground had been purchased with $550 found in the gangster's pockets.

A modest bouquet, purchased with the money found on the bullet riddled corpse and bearing the card, "let him without sin cast the first stone," rested on the casket.

ST. PAUL MAYOR WANTS SPECIAL SESSION SOON

LEGISLATURE TO ACT ON TWIN CITIES SEWAGE

WANTS JOINT SEWAGE DISPOSAL BILL FOR BOTH CITIES PASSED

DECLARES GOVERNOR OLSON PROMISED SESSION WHEN VETOED FORMER BILL

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 22—(U.P.)—Mayor Gerhart Bundlie of St. Paul today announced that he will ask governor Floyd B. Olson to call a special session of the legislature to pass a joint sewage disposal bill for Minneapolis and St. Paul.

The St. Paul city council today adopted a resolution agreeing to the Minneapolis plan of sewage disposal and Mayor Bundlie was authorized to appoint a committee to draw up plans with Minneapolis.

The action was the result of an agreement made Friday by delegations from St. Paul and Minneapolis and council members at a meeting presided over by Vince A. Day, Olson's secretary.

Bundlie said Olson undoubtedly will call a special session for the governor promised he would do so when he vetoed the St. Paul sewage bill passed by the 1931 legislature.

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 22—(U.P.)—After years of discussion and controversy, the Twin Cities today had agreed on a tentative plan of sewage disposal plant construction.

A heated session was held yesterday afternoon at which it was decided for the two cities' delegates to report back to their prospective councils for final approval of a plan which would include joint construction of the disposal plant without including South St. Paul.

South St. Paul, the packing center on the Mississippi, ought to be included, the St. Paul delegation contended but when that point threatened to result in a complete breaking off of negotiations, Mayor T. H. Prince of South St. Paul withdrew and said the two cities should go ahead.

Under the proposed plan, South St. Paul and Newport may use the plant under a contract basis.

Engineers representing the two cities will work out a joint plan which will be submitted to the two city councils for final approval. Indications were that now the general outline was agreed upon the two towns would proceed to settle the questions which has been a controversy for years. The last session of the state legislature passed a bill for sewage disposal which included South St. Paul. Governor Floyd B. Olson vetoed the measure.

Vince A. Day, the governor's secretary, presided at yesterday's meeting and was credited by some with preventing an open break in the negotiations when the bitterness of delegates became intense.

Berlin, Aug. 22.—(U.P.)—The 100-mark tax which has been imposed on Germans going abroad during the financial crisis was ordered abolished today, effective August 26.

Hankow, China, Aug. 22.—(U.P.)—One thousand refugees in houses of the Kai Yu barracks at Wuchang, across the Yangtze from Hankow, were killed today when the Chang Kung Chi dyke collapsed and allowed flood waters to sweep over the barracks and for miles beyond. Two Chinese hotels in Hankow have collapsed, drowning scores.

SEEKING SOLUTION OF THE EMPIRE'S FINANCIAL CRISIS

EXTRAORDINARY CABINET SESSION CALLED BY PREMIER MACDONALD

DRAMATIC DEVELOPMENTS ARE EXPECTED, CROWD WATCHES MINISTERS GATHER

By KEITH JONES
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

London, Aug. 22—(U.P.)—The labor ministers gathered today for the first Saturday cabinet session since the world war to continue their urgent quest for a solution to the empire's financial crisis.

The meeting assembled at 9:30 a. m., the ministers hurrying to No. 10 Downing street—the premier's official residence—after hasty breakfasts and a brief's night's sleep.

The extraordinary cabinet session was called by Premier J. Ramsay MacDonald last night, after the ministers had been in almost continuous session for two days. Dramatic developments were expected.

J. H. Thomas, secretary of state for dominions, was among the first to arrive, puffing his pipe. An eager crowd watched the ministers gather.

The labor government faced one of the most critical post-war crises that any government has been confronted with since the general strike in 1926.

By KEITH JONES
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

London, Aug. 22—(U.P.)—While the labor cabinet announced this afternoon that it was finishing a plan which it believes would meet the present crucial situation, King George abandoned his holiday in Scotland and prepared to hasten back to London.

He will arrive tomorrow as the cabinet meets to hear results of the final planning for its solution of the crisis.

After a day of meeting with conservative and liberal leaders and considering their ideas, the cabinet adjourned until tomorrow evening and official statement said it was "putting the finishing touches on a scheme which, it is believed will meet the situation."

Trio Believed Flying From Berlin to N. Y. in a Non-Stop Flight

Berlin, Aug. 22.—(U.P.)—Willy Rody and two companions were believed on their way to New York today on a projected non-stop flight to the United States. They left Templehof airdrome outside Berlin at 7:03 A. M. for an unannounced destination over the ocean.

Rody, it was learned, obtained permission to fly over Newfoundland, Canada and the United States, and New York was believed to be his goal.

Rody, of Ems, Germany, was accompanied by Christian Johansen, of Hamburg, his pilot; and an unidentified Portuguese.

The plane is a single-motored Junkers formerly owned by Charles A. Levine of New York, in which Levine and Bert Acosta, trans-Atlantic flier, had planned a Europe-to-America flight. Rody bought the machine with money he inherited recently.

Trading was quieter than the last 50 minutes yesterday when the turnover amounted to 600,000 shares.

Steel dipped to 87¼ off ¼; Westinghouse Electric held unchanged at 63 while General Electric eased 1-8 to 40¼. Anaconda made a slight gain to 24¼.

6 DEAD AND 11 WOUNDED ON 12 MILE BATTLE FRONT

LITTLE GIRL IS SECOND CHILD TO DIE IN GANGSTER RAIDS IN NEW YORK

PAYROLL THEFT FOLLOWED SCENES NEVER EQUALLED IN PEACE TIME CITY

New York, August 22—(U.P.)—The world's second largest city mobilized today against crime—after an outlaw insurrection which left a toll of six dead, one a little girl, and 11 wounded along a crimson 12-mile battle front that began at the scene of a payroll holdup.

The sixth victim, Gloria Lopey, a four-year-old child whose parents were wounded, died today. She lost the fight for her life, after a blood transfusion first gave hope she would survive.

The girl was the second child to die in gangster raids on New York streets within a month. Michael Veneghallo, five, had been killed in "Little Italy" as gunmen raked the streets in an attempt to kill a rival who escaped.

That scene was almost as sensational in its setting as the scene of last night's battle.

Police, firemen, motorists and pedestrians had fought a running 90-minute gun battle over a five mile area before rusk closed on a scene never equalled during peace times in an American city.

Streets were strewn with dead bodies and wounded participants. There were wrecked automobiles, discarded armament, and thousands of spectators in whom fear, amazement, curiosity and wrath fought for supremacy.

Death of the two bandits and their chauffeur who started the blood running above the Harlem river when they deliberately shot down a payroll guard, was the signal for the end of the gunfire.

The dead included one other policeman who gave chase after the holdup, and the little girl.

The automobile, was literally peppered with gun shots.

The little girl mortally wounded was hit as she sat beside her mother, soon to give birth to another child. The two were in the car driven by John Lopez, a city fireman. Both parents were injured.

One bullet hit the youngster, Gloria, above the right eye, one in the throat and another in the neck. The mother was hurt by flying glass and is suffering shock, and the father received a superficial bullet wound.

Hope for survival of the little girl was abandoned near midnight by physicians.

A blood transfusion revived hope momentarily, but not long after she began to sink. The mother sat at the bedside.

Hours after the battle, police and witnesses had not entirely pieced together the story of what happened. To the best of their knowledge, this is the story of the gun fight.

One hundred and thirty employes of the Mondoza Fur Dyeing Company awaited the weekly payroll, $4,619. At 4:45 Manager Loyd Fomhof arrived from the Bronx County Trust Co., beside him was Patrolman Walter J. Webb, a guard.

Their car turned to enter the alley The guard started to alight. Two bandits leaped at him. One got the satchel of money from Fomhof. The other fired at Webb, the bullet ripping through the policeman's shield, his lung and heart. He dropped, his hand on a trigger.

Fomhof screamed his way into the building. The bandits leaped into the car and speeded away.

Mitchell Fraill, 13, saw them speed away. He had witnessed the holdup and murder.

At McKinley Square the bandits meanwhile had abandoned their sedan and leaped into a taxicab awaiting them. The driver was Herbert Haas, 39.

Motorcycle Patrolman Edwin Churchill, gun drawn, streaked into view. He fired. The bandits returned the fire, two for one. Their first bullet sprawled him off the machine, and six more bullets were drilled into his senseless body.

Churchill lived four hours.

Fireman Vincent Hyde picked up Churchill's revolver, reloaded, emptied the gun, and in turn was shot down, the policeman's gun clattering to the street for the second time.

Then the taxicab cruised past the Lopez car, bullets flying.

Ralph B. Katz, driving another taxicab, drove within range. A bullet shattered his windshield, both bullet and glass wounding him.

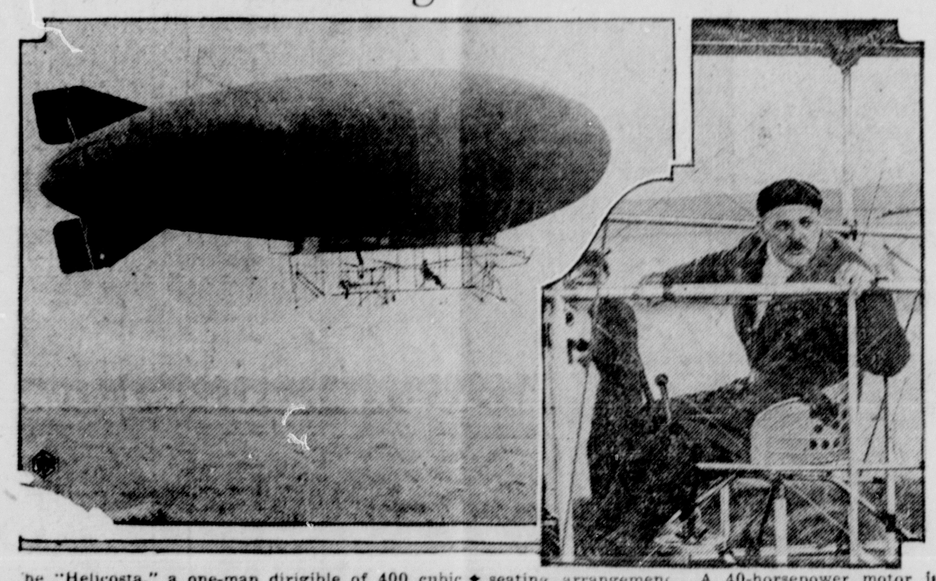

By this time the bandit car was trailed by police cars, civilian cars loaded with police, 30 or more machines from whose running boards police guns spit lead.

Patrolman Albert Walker, Albert Morrell and Detective Killey joined the chase in a commandeered cab driven by William Nugent. They were outdistanced.

Another car careened through traffic to within hailing distance. The bandits lowered a window, and a fusilade greeted it. Jacob Siegel, driver, David J. Louis and Francis McPhillip, the occupants were wounded.

One-Man Dirigible Does its Stuff

The "Helicosta," a one-man dirigible of 400 cubic meters capacity, capable of maneuvering in any direction, either forward, backward or sideways, is shown in full flight (left) over the airfield at Orly, France, (near Paris). A skeleton construction underneath the gas bag contains the motive power and seating arrangement. A 40-horsepower motor is the dirigible's only motive power and its pilot can control the landing of the ship so well that it can be set down on a handkerchief placed on the field. Or so says M. Oechichen (shown at right seated at controls), who developed the "Helicosta."

Officers had received reports that the night before Mrs. Patterson's body was found an automobile containing two men and a barefoot woman stopped at an oil station in Antioch. The station attendant said the woman was either dead or asleep and had her face turned toward the back seat cushion. Mrs. Patterson was barefoot when found.

Krogewski and Shim read of this report and told Chicago police they were the two men in the car. They said the woman with them was Jenny Biese, that she was asleep at the time, and that they could produce her on short notice if necessary to prove they had nothing to do with the crime.

HARRY (SLIM) MORRIS LAID TO REST IN LONELY GRAVE AT RED WING

MORBID CROWD ATTENDS, SALVATION ARMY IN CHARGE OF RITES

Red Wing, Minn., Aug. 22—(U.P.)—With no friends or relatives to pay respect, Harry (Slim) Morris, alias Jerry A. Camben, was buried today in a lonely grave in Oakland cemetery.

A morbid crowd attended the gangter's funeral. He was slain in a gun battle at Wacouta Monday. Captain H. J. Bollinger of the Salvation army was in charge of the simple services.

In a brief sermon, he said, "let him without sin cast the first stone while circumstantial evidence connects this man with most serious crimes, no court of the land has convicted him. God now is his only judge."

The body was taken to Oakland cemetery where a grave apart from the principal burying ground had been purchased with $550 found in the gangster's pockets.

A modest bouquet, purchased with the money found on the bullet riddled corpse and bearing the card, "let him without sin cast the first stone," rested on the casket.

ST. PAUL MAYOR WANTS SPECIAL SESSION SOON

LEGISLATURE TO ACT ON TWIN CITIES SEWAGE

WANTS JOINT SEWAGE DISPOSAL BILL FOR BOTH CITIES PASSED

DECLARES GOVERNOR OLSON PROMISED SESSION WHEN VETOED FORMER BILL

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 22—(U.P.)—Mayor Gerhart Bundlie of St. Paul today announced that he will ask governor Floyd B. Olson to call a special session of the legislature to pass a joint sewage disposal bill for Minneapolis and St. Paul.

The St. Paul city council today adopted a resolution agreeing to the Minneapolis plan of sewage disposal and Mayor Bundlie was authorized to appoint a committee to draw up plans with Minneapolis.

The action was the result of an agreement made Friday by delegations from St. Paul and Minneapolis and council members at a meeting presided over by Vince A. Day, Olson's secretary.

Bundlie said Olson undoubtedly will call a special session for the governor promised he would do so when he vetoed the St. Paul sewage bill passed by the 1931 legislature.

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 22—(U.P.)—After years of discussion and controversy, the Twin Cities today had agreed on a tentative plan of sewage disposal plant construction.

A heated session was held vesterday afternoon at which it was decided for the two cities' delegates to report back to their prospective councils for final approval of a plan which would include joint construction of the disposal plant without including South St. Paul.

South St. Paul, the packing center on the Mississippi, ought to be included, the St. Paul delegation contended but when that point threatened to result in a complete breaking off of negotiations, Mayor T. H. Prince of South St. Paul withdrew and said the two cities should go ahead.

Under the proposed plan, South St. Paul and Newport may use the plant under a contract basis.

Engineers representing the two cities will work out a joint plan which will be submitted to the two city councils for final approval. Indications were that now the general outline was agreed upon the two towns would proceed to settle the questions which has been a controversy for years. The last session of the state legislature passed a bill for sewage disposal which included South St. Paul. Governor Floyd B. Olson vetoed the measure.

Vince A. Day, the governor's secretary, presided at yesterday's meeting and was credited by some with preventing an open break in the negotiations when the bitterness of delegates became intense.

SEEKING SOLUTION OF THE EMPIRE'S FINANCIAL CRISIS

EXTRAORDINARY CABINET SESSION CALLED BY PREMIER MACDONALD

DRAMATIC DEVELOPMENTS ARE EXPECTED, CROWD WATCHES MINISTERS GATHER

By KEITH JONES
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

London, Aug. 22—(U.P.)—The labor ministers gathered today for the first Saturday cabinet session since the world war to continue their urgent quest for a solution to the empire's financial crisis.

The meeting assembled at 9:30 a. m., the ministers hurrying to No. 10 Downing street—the premier's official residence—after hasty breakfasts and a brief's night's sleep.

The extraordinary cabinet session was called by Premier J. Ramsay MacDonald last night, after the ministers had been in almost continuous session for two days. Dramatic developments were expected.

J. H. Thomas, secretary of state for dominions, was among the first to arrive, puffing his pipe. An eager crowd watched the ministers gather.

The labor government faced one of the most critical post-war crises that any government has been confronted with since the general strike in 1926.

By KEITH JONES
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

London, Aug. 22—(U.P.)—While the labor cabinet announced this afternoon that it was finishing a plan which it believes would meet the present crucial situation, King George abandoned his holiday in Scotland and prepared to hasten back to London.

He will arrive tomorrow as the cabinet meets to hear results of the final planning for its solution of the crisis.

After a day of meeting with conservative and liberal leaders and considering their ideas, the cabinet adjourned until tomorrow evening and official statement said it was "putting the finishing touches on a scheme which, it is believed will meet the situation."

Trio Believed Flying From Berlin to N. Y. in a Non-Stop Flight

Berlin, Aug. 22.—(U.P.)—Willy Rody and two companions were believed on their way to New York today on a projected non-stop flight to the United States. They left Templehof airdrome outside Berlin at 7:03 A. M. for an unannounced destination over the ocean.

Rody, it was learned, obtained permission to fly over Newfoundland, Canada and the United States, and New York was believed to be his goal.

Rody, of Ems, Germany, was accompanied by Christian Johansen, of Hamburg, his pilot; and an unidentified Portuguese.

The plane is a single-motored Junkers formerly owned by Charles A. Levine of New York, in which Levine and Bert Acosta, trans-Atlantic flier, had planned a Europe-to-America flight. Rody bought the machine with money he inherited recently.

6 DEAD AND 11 WOUNDED ON 12 MILE BATTLE FRONT

LITTLE GIRL IS SECOND CHILD TO DIE IN GANGSTER RAIDS IN NEW YORK

PAYROLL THEFT FOLLOWED SCENES NEVER EQUALLED IN PEACE TIME CITY

New York, August 22—(U.P.)—The world's second largest city mobilized today against crime—after an outlaw insurrection which left a toll of six dead, one a little girl, and 11 wounded along a crimson 12-mile battle front that began at the scene of a payroll holdup.

The sixth victim, Gloria Lopey, a four-year-old child whose parents were wounded, died today. She lost the fight for her life, after a blood transfusion first gave hope she would survive.

The girl was the second child to die in gangster raids on New York streets within a month. Michael Veneghallo, five, had been killed in "Little Italy" as gunmen raked the streets in an attempt to kill a rival who escaped.

That scene was almost as sensational in its setting as the scene of last night's battle.

Police, firemen, motorists and pedestrians had fought a running 90-minute gun battle over a five mile area before rusk closed on a scene never equalled during peace times in an American city.

Streets were strewn with dead bodies and wounded participants. There were wrecked automobiles, discarded armament, and thousands of spectators in whom fear, amazement, curiosity and wrath fought for supremacy.

Death of the two bandits and their chauffeur who started the blood running above the Harlem river when they deliberately shot down a payroll guard, was the signal for the end of the gunfire.

The dead included one other policeman who gave chase after the holdup, and the little girl.

The automobile, was literally peppered with gun shots.

The little girl mortally wounded was hit as she sat beside her mother, soon to give birth to another child. The two were in the car driven by John Lopez, a city fireman. Both parents were injured.

One bullet hit the youngster, Gloria, above the right eye, one in the throat and another in the neck. The mother was hurt by flying glass and is suffering shock, and the father received a superficial bullet wound.

Hope for survival of the little girl was abandoned near midnight by physicians.

A blood transfusion revived hope momentarily, but not long after she began to sink. The mother sat at the bedside.

Hours after the battle, police and witnesses had not entirely pieced together the story of what happened. To the best of their knowledge, this is the story of the gun fight.

One hundred and thirty employes of the Mondoza Fur Dyeing Company awaited the weekly payroll, $4,619. At 4:45 Manager Loyd Fomhof arrived from the Bronx County Trust Co., beside him was Patrolman Walter J. Webb, a guard.

Their car turned to enter the alley The guard started to alight. Two bandits leaped at him. One got the satchel of money from Fomhof. The other fired at Webb, the bullet ripping through the policeman's shield, his lung and heart. He dropped, his hand on a trigger.

Fomhof screamed his way into the building. The bandits leaped into the car and speeded away.

Mitchell Fraill, 13, saw them speed away. He had witnessed the holdup and murder.

At McKinley Square the bandits meanwhile had abandoned their sedan and leaped into a taxicab awaiting them. The driver was Herbert Haas, 39.

Motorcycle Patrolman Edwin Churchill, gun drawn, streaked into view. He fired. The bandits returned the fire, two for one. Their first bullet sprawled him off the machine, and six more bullets were drilled into his senseless body.

Churchill lived four hours.

Fireman Vincent Hyde picked up Churchill's revolver, reloaded, emptied the gun, and in turn was shot down, the policeman's gun clattering to the street for the second time.

Then the taxicab cruised past the Lopez car, bullets flying.

Ralph B. Katz, driving another taxicab, drove within range. A bullet shattered his windshield, both bullet and glass wounding him.

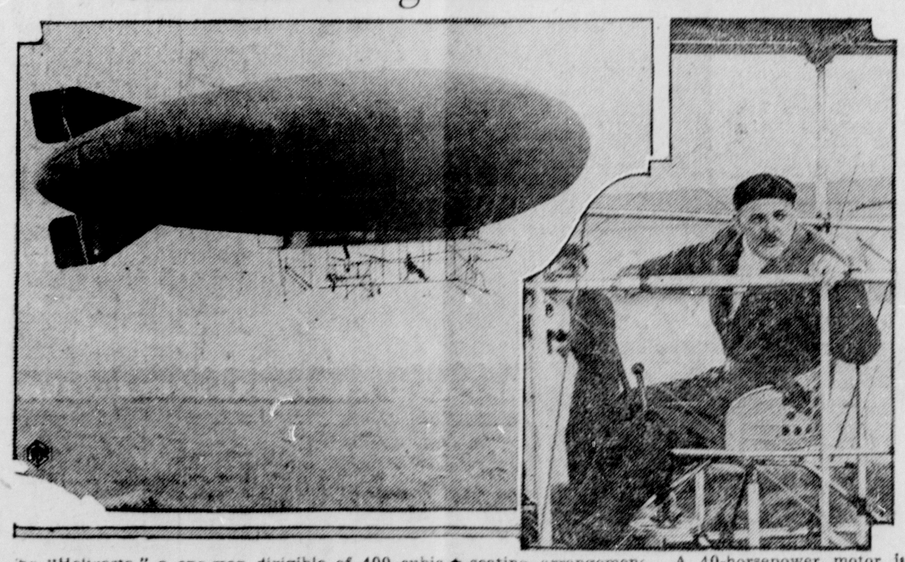

By this time the bandit car was trailed by police cars, civilian cars loaded with police, 30 or more machines from whose running boards police guns spit lead.

Patrolman Albert Walker, Albert Morrell and Detective Killey joined the chase in a commandeered cab driven by William Nugent. They were outdistanced.

Another car careened through traffic to within hailing distance. The bandits lowered a window, and a fusilade greeted it. Jacob Siegel, driver, David J. Louis and Francis McPhillip, the occupants were wounded.

One-Man Dirigible Does Its Stuff

The "Helicosta," a one-man dirigible of 400 cubic meters capacity, capable of maneuvering in any direction, either forward, backward or sideways, is shown in full flight (left) over the airfield at Orly, France, (near Paris). A skeleton construction underneath the gas bag contains the motive power and seating arrangement. A 40-horsepower motor is the dirigible's only motive power and its pilot can control the landing of the ship so well that it can be set down on a handkerchief placed on the field. Or so says M. Oechichen (shown at right seated at controls), who developed the "Helicosta."

"GOODBYE"

We have many things to think about—
When Friends are soon to leave us,
So many things to be glad about,
A few perhaps, to grieve us.

We think of the happy "yesterdays,"
"Good times" we've had together—
When skies were blue, and friendship true
Had many a rosy fetter.

Now if the parting of the way
May bring a thought of sadness,
As some must go, and some must stay
Still, rings this note of gladness.

That absence cannot break one tie,
Which God has bound together
And that the meaning of "Goodbye"
Is just—"God keep each other."

"GOODBYE"

We have many things to think about—
When Friends are soon to leave us,
So many things to be glad about,
A few perhaps, to grieve us.

We think of the happy "yesterdays,"
"Good times" we've had together—
When skies were blue, and friendship true
Had many a rosy fetter.

Now if the parting of the way
May bring a thought of sadness,
As some must go, and some must stay
Still, rings this note of gladness.

That absence cannot break one tie,
Which God has bound together
And that the meaning of "Goodbye"
Is just—"God keep each other."

Anoka, Minn., Aug. 22.—(UP)— Two brothers, suspected of an attack on a 14-year-old girl, today were believed fugitives as a search for them moved northward.

Picturesque Apron-and-Cuff Sets

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

WHEN the modern business woman with a family comes home at night and must turn immediately to the preparation of dinner, or when the Sunday night hostess must serve light refreshments without changing to kitchen attire, her first thought is of an apron that will protect her pretty frock.

To be sure, the apron itself is all right in its way, but it does not protect the sleeves and so, as always, necessity becomes the "mother of invention" in that some clever brain has devised apron "sets" which include deep matching cuffs which are worn as you see in the picture.

It is not only the novelty and practicability of the cuffs as illustrated which attract, but the aprons themselves are very new and unusual. If there is one thing more than another which makes appeal to the home-sewing woman it is a new apron pattern. They are very easy to make, the aprons pictured, if you use a bias trim for bindings and decoration.

Make them of any suitable material. Organdie or dotted swiss is suggested for the more dressy affairs that are to cover the Sunday night frock and its sleeves with gingham, percale or gay cretonne for every day use. The bias trim comes in the proper width, cut on a true bias, ready to apply, and in boilfast colors.

Quite a new idea is the surplice front effect which fashions the apron to the left. Then, too, the skirt of this apron is sewed onto a V-shape waistline which is slenderizing. For this model the designer chooses a dainty flowered percale. In this instance the bias trim is used for binding only. For the other apron which, by the way, is made of gingham the bias trim also forms decorative bands at the front and on the cuffs. Note that circular-cut side sections are seamed into the skirt portion, achieving a graceful flare for its hemline.

Where sheer material such as organdie is employed, use sheer fabric thread in matching color to stitch down the bias bands. This fabric thread does not go by number although in reality it is equal to a number one hundred ordinary cotton. It requires the machine gauge set to about twenty-five stitches to the inch. It is excellent for seaming frocks of sheer material as the fine stitches and the fine needle prevents the seams from fraying. Paris couturiers are using it on silks and velvets (it has an exquisite luster). In fact the use of exceedingly fine thread, very fine needles and little stitches is one of the sewing secrets learned from French dressmakers.

Travel Prints Are Talk of Town

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

WITH the back-to-the-city movement, which soon will be bringing wandering vacationists into an environment of schoolroom, office and campus, comes the urge for something stunning and thoroughly practical to wear during the busy autumn days.

There is no doubt about the answer to this call for a chic and serviceable "first" fall costume. All fashiondom is proclaiming the good news about the dress or jacket-suit made of the new travel prints (some call them "city prints") which do not wrinkle or crush and which are patterned in the most fetching colors one may ever hope to see. And are they trig looking? They are just that. So much so that to fail to yield to their lure is to lost an opportunity to look dressed at one's smartest during the daytime hours.

The colors of these handsome travel prints are planned for service at the same time that they reflect the rich autumnal tones and tints which fascinate the eye. They are expressed in terms of gay plaids, checks, novelty strips and tweedlike effects which are typical of the fall mode.

Almost without exception every one-piece dress has its own jacket. Then, too, they are tailored in a town way and this adds to their swank. Cunning details mark their styling, such as a tri-color scarf collar or a bolero jacket which ties at the front in a soft bow in a manner as illustrated to the left in the picture. The clever little pockets which pose abreast of this bolero are swagger, too, as is also the skirt with its carefully stitched pleats and its pointed yoke. Any maid or matron will enjoy wearing this cool sleeveless dress (the sleeves are mere caps) right now, and with its jacket for months to come.

The companion costume shown in the picture is likewise intriguing. It is blue, that is its predominating color is blue, although a medley of hues are subtly introduced in its patterning. The mode of wearing white accessories is followed in the pleated white mousseline collar and frills, also the white kid and gauntlet gloves.

It is possible to get these prints in as modest tones as one may desire, the checks and plaids and intermingled effects being worked out to a nicety in prevailing tones of red, brown, green, rust, navy or black.

Of course, these nifty costumes of travel silk prints will be topped off with chapeaux which announce a revolutionary change in the millinery program, in that the new hats are small and are worn with a roguish tip-tilt over-the-eye manner which is proving most interesting and becoming.

Simply Old Superstition

The word "lunatic" comes from the Latin word "luna," meaning moon, and it is a old superstition that the moon has a direct effect upon the brain of human beings, hence the superstition that sleeping in the moonlight causes blindness, insanity and kindred calamities. This has long since been disproved by scientific investigation.

Monkeys Once Roamed Holland

Farthest north for the monkey tribe is believed to have been claimed for a species that once, far earlier than history records, inhabited what is now Holland. Fossil remains recently discovered in that country show these monkeys to have been similar to those now found around Gibraltar, although somewhat larger, says Popular Science Monthly. Scientists believe that the fossils found in Holland indicate that a mild climate once existed there, as monkeys cannot endure cold.

SEARCH FOR GOLD OF FAMED BANDIT

Ancient Papers Tell of Ali Pasha's Hoard.

Athens, Greece.—Treasure amassed by the notorious Ali Pasha of Tepeleni, who terrorized the Balkans 150 years ago, is being sought near Janina, in northern Greece, where the pasha held his court.

Working from recently discovered documents, archeologists have found a tunnel which supposedly leads to the buried treasures. In the tunnel they discovered the skeletons of nine workmen hired by Ali and killed by him so that he alone would know the hiding place.

The splendor of Ali's court at Janina has become almost a legend throughout the Balkans. Ambassadors of the great powers came to him and the poet Byron was his guest. He was successively the ally of Napoleon and Lord Nelson. At the penk of his career his glory outshone that of the sultan in Constantinople.

Humble Start.

Yet Ali arose from a humble beginning. He was born in 1741 at Tepeleni, a hill village in Albania. His father, who held the hereditary office of bey of Tepeleni, was killed by neighboring chiefs who seized his territory when Ali was fourteen years old.

Ali was left in the care of his mother Khamko, a woman of extraordinary character. She herself formed a brigand band and inspired the boy with her own fierce temper.

Within a few years he regained possession of Tepeleni and took vengeance on his enemies. Then, in secure his own power, he murdered his brother and imprisoned his mother on a charge of attempting to poison him.

In Russian War.

In 1787 Ali took part in the war against Russia and was rewarded by being made pasha of Trikala in Thessaly and Derwend-Pasha of Rumelia. His power was augmented when he succeeded in being nominated pasha of Janina.

It was only natural that his power should arouse the jealousy of the Sultan Mahmud II, who had formulated a policy of curbing the strength of the provincial pashas.

The sultan's pretext for an attack on Ali came in 1820 when the "Lion of Janina" violated the sanctity of Istanbul itself by attempting to procure the murder of an enemy in the very precincts of the sultan's palace. The bulk of the turkish forces under Khursid Pasha were sent against him.

Although over eighty, he held his own for two years. He was forced to sue for peace in the spring of 1822.

He was granted an interview with Khursid Pasha, was received and dismissed with friendly assurances. As he turned to leave the tent he was stabbed in the back. Then his head was cut off and sent to Constantinople.

Although Ali was known to have amassed much treasure, the existence of a buried hoard was considered a legend until the recent discovery of the document. Now the discovery of the tunnel has stimulated efforts to find the treasure.

Anoka, Minn., Aug. 22.—(U.P.) — Two brothers, suspected of an attack on a 14-year-old girl, today were believed fugitives as a search for them moved northward.

Picturesque Apron-and-Cuff Sets

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

WHEN the modern business woman with a family comes home at night and must turn immediately to the preparation of dinner, or when the Sunday night hostess must serve light refreshments without changing to kitchen attire, her first thought is of an apron that will protect her pretty frock.

To be sure, the apron itself is all right in its way, but it does not protect the sleeves and so, as always, necessity becomes the "mother of invention" in that some clever brain has devised apron "sets" which include deep matching cuffs which are worn as you see in the picture.

It is not only the novelty and practicability of the cuffs as illustrated which attract, but the aprons themselves are very new and unusual. If there is one thing more than another which makes appeal to the home-sewing woman it is a new apron pattern. They are very easy to make, the aprons pictured, if you use a bias trim for bindings and decoration.

Make them of any suitable material. Organdie or dotted swiss is suggested for the more dressy affairs that are to cover the Sunday night frock and its sleeves with gingham, percale or gay cretonne for every day use. The bias trim comes in the proper width, cut on a true bias, ready to apply, and in boilfast colors.

Quite a new idea is the surplice front effect which fashions the apron to the left. Then, too, the skirt of this apron is sewed onto a V-shape waistline which is slenderizing. For this model the designer chooses a dainty flowered percale. In this instance the bias trim is used for binding only. For the other apron which, by the way, is made of gingham the bias trim also forms decorative bands at the front and on the cuffs. Note that circular-cut side sections are seamed into the skirt portion, achieving a graceful flare for its hemline.

Where sheer material such as organdie is employed, use sheer fabric thread in matching color to stitch down the bias bands. This fabric thread does not go by number although in reality it is equal to a number one hundred ordinary cotton. It requires the machine gauge set to about twenty-five stitches to the inch. It is excellent for seaming frocks of sheer material as the fine stitches and the fine needle prevents the seams from fraying. Paris couturiers are using it on silks and velvets (it has an exquisite luster). In fact the use of exceedingly fine thread, very fine needles and little stitches is one of the sewing secrets learned from French dressmakers.

Travel Prints Are Talk of Town

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

WITH the back-to-the-city movement, which soon will be bringing wandering vacationists into an environment of schoolroom, office and campus, comes the urge for something stunning and thoroughly practical to wear during the busy autumn days.

There is no doubt about the answer to this call for a chic and serviceable "first" fall costume. All fashiondom is proclaiming the good news about the dress or jacket-suit made of the new travel prints (some call them "city prints") which do not wrinkle or crush and which are patterned in the most fetching colors one may ever hope to see. And are they trig looking? They are just that. So much so that to fail to yield to their lure is to lost an opportunity to look dressed at one's smartest during the daytime hours.

The colors of these handsome travel prints are planned for service at the same time that they reflect the rich autumnal tones and tints which fascinate the eye. They are expressed in terms of gay plaids, checks, novelty strips and tweedlike effects which are typical of the fall mode.

Almost without exception every one-piece dress has its own jacket. Then, too, they are tailored in a town way and this adds to their swank. Cunning details mark their styling, such as a tri-color scarf collar or a bolero jacket which ties at the front in a soft bow in a manner as illustrated to the left in the picture. The clever little pockets which pose abreast of this bolero are swagger, too, as is also the skirt with its carefully stitched pleats and its pointed yoke. Any maid or matron will enjoy wearing this cool sleeveless dress (the sleeves are mere caps) right now, and with its jacket for months to come.

The companion costume shown in the picture is likewise intriguing. It is blue, that is its predominating color is blue, although a medley of hues are subtly introduced in its patterning. The mode of wearing white accessories is followed in the pleated white mousseline collar and frills, also the white kid and gauntlet gloves.

It is possible to get these prints in as modest tones as one may desire, the checks and plaids and intermingled effects being worked out to a nicety in prevailing tones of red, brown, green, rust, navy or black.

Of course, these nifty costumes of travel silk prints will be topped off with chapeaux which announce a revolutionary change in the millinery program, in that the new hats are small and are worn with a roguish tip-tilt over-the-eye manner which is proving most interesting and becoming.

Household Pests—the House Fly

ONE of the chief pests of the housesold in late August and September is the common house or typhoid fly, so-called by the latter name because his chief habitat and breeding ground is in the decaying refuse, garbage and offal in which typhoid germs chiefly propagate.

Few people as they watch a fly buzzing around the room see in him the terrible menace he really is.

Under the microscope the house fly is seen to possess a hairy body and spongy feet, being the most effective gatherers of germs put by nature on any insect or animal.

While the fly lives but a short time, in that time it can breed thousands of its kind. The female lays its eggs in most convenient filth, the larvae or fly maggot then appears, which finally turns into the fly which, germ laden and often afflicted with parasites peculiar to fly life, buzzes off in search of food.

As most everybody knows, sugar is a favorite edible of the fly.

Examinaton of grains of it on which flies have alighted, has shown the sticky globule to be literally covered with germs that have adhered to it from the fly's fetlocks.

From fly to sugar, sugar to foods, foods to mouth and into the human system. What a viciously subtle method of contamination it is. No wonder disease, pestilence and death follow the housefly.

Every woman, man and child owes it to themselves to destroy every fly or other disease-bearing insect they see.

The old fashioned method of swatting the fly is unsatisfactory for it has been found that while the fly is killed, the germs it carries still remain alive, still capable of infecting or contaminating food and person.

There are several liquid products you can use in your crusade against insect life in your home.

Freshman Week at University of Minnesota

A MAROON and gold handbook containing 66 pages has been mailed out to all prospective Freshmen that intend to matriculate at the University of Minnesota next fall for the purpose of orienting them before they arrive on the campus for Freshman week which will be held September 23 to 26.

The handbook is a composite pamphlet of articles written by the deans of all the colleges as well as the heads of some of the departments. Fourteen pages are devoted to student activities.

In the introduction, Lotus D. Coffman, president of the University, advises new students that, "The real things which justify the maintenance of this institution are the qualities within yourselves whch you bring with you."

"The handbook should be the Freshman's constant companion during his first week on the campus," Dr. Oscar C. Burkhard, director of Freshman Week, advises. "We have tried to include all general information that will be necessary to the student during Freshman Week in the book."

Some of the articles are "The purpose of Freshman Week" by Dean J. B. Johnstone; "Have You Chosen Your Vocation," by E. G. Williamson, chairman of the committee on vocational guidance; "Ways and Means of Helping You Solve Your Personal Problems," by Donald G. Paterson, Professor of Psychology; "Principles of Effective Study," by Professor Charles Bird, department of psychology.

Household Pests—the House Fly

ONE of the chief pests of the housesold in late August and September is the common house or typhoid fly, so-called by the latter name because his chief habitat and breeding ground is in the decaying refuse, garbage and offal in which typhoid germs chiefly propagate.

Few people as they watch a fly buzzing around the room see in him the terrible menace he really is.

Under the microscope the house fly is seen to possess a hairy body and spongy feet, being the most effective gatherers of germs put by nature on any insect or animal.

While the fly lives but a short time, in that time it can breed thousands of its kind. The female lays its eggs in most convenient filth, the larvae or fly maggot then appears, which finally turns into the fly which, germ laden and often afflicted with parasites peculiar to fly life, buzzes off in search of food.

As most everybody knows, sugar is a favorite edible of the fly.

Examinaton of grains of it on which flies have alighted, has shown the sticky globule to be literally covered with germs that have adhered to it from the fly's fetlocks.

From fly to sugar, sugar to foods, foods to mouth and into the human system. What a viciously subtle method of contamination it is. No wonder disease, pestilence and death follow the housefly.

Every woman, man and child owes it to themselves to destroy every fly or other disease-bearing insect they see.

The old fashioned method of swatting the fly is unsatisfactory for it has been found that while the fly is killed, the germs it carries still remain alive, still capable of infecting or contaminating food and person.

There are several liquid products you can use in your crusade against insect life in your home.

Freshman Week at University of Minnesota

A MAROON and gold handbook containing 66 pages has been mailed out to all prospective Freshmen that intend to matriculate at the University of Minnesota next fall for the purpose of orienting them before they arrive on the campus for Freshman week which will be held September 23 to 26.

The handbook is a composite pamphlet of articles written by the deans of all the colleges as well as the heads of some of the departments. Fourteen pages are devoted to student activities.

In the introduction, Lotus D. Coffman, president of the University, advises new students that, "The real things which justify the maintenance of this institution are the qualities within yourselves whch you bring with you."

"The handbook should be the Freshman's constant companion during his first week on the campus," Dr. Oscar C. Burkhard, director of Freshman Week, advises. "We have tried to include all general information that will be necessary to the student during Freshman Week in the book."

Some of the articles are "The purpose of Freshman Week" by Dean J. B. Johnstone; "Have You Chosen Your Vocation," by E. G. Williamson, chairman of the committee on vocational guidance; "Ways and Means of Helping You Solve Your Personal Problems," by Donald G. Paterson, Professor of Psychology; "Principles of Effective Study," by Professor Charles Bird, department of psychology.

There is a complete survey of the University Library written by F. K. Walter, Librarian, and directions as to the use of the Students' health service by Dr. H. D. Lees.

Parent-Teachers State Convention

THE Parent-Teachers state convention to be held at Brainerd October 19, 20 and 21 is expected to be one of the largest conventions held in Brainerd in many years, bringing 500 delegates.

This is a convention that is not distinguished by a parade, by band or other musical contests, but which deeply ponders the problems connected with parents and teachers and pupils in school and other relations, taking as its theme, "For Every Child."

These gatherings of the Minnesota Congress of Parents and Teachers are attended by parents, school teachers, professional men and women, persons in all walks of life. Women are largely in the majority in attendance. It is an earnest convention whose decisions result in real advancement in child culture. Brainerd welcomes these delegates knowing they have a real mission in life, a most praiseworthy one.

'SYNTHETIC' DOUBLEHEADERS TO BOLSTER ATTENDANCE

BASEBALL OWNERS ADOPTING THIS NEW EXPEDIENT

ONE-SIDED PENNANT RACES DETRACTING FROM INTEREST IN MAJORS

RIVAL CLUBS ARE CONVINCED THERE IS NO PROSPECT BREAKING INTO WORLD SERIES

By L. S. CAMERON
(United Press Sports Editor)

New York, Aug. 22—(U.P.)—With one-sided pennant races detracting from interest in major league baseball, club owners are resorting to the expedient of "synthetic" doubleheaders to bolster attendance.

Philadelphia's 13-game lead in the American league and St. Louis' 9 1-2 game margin in the National have convinced owners of rival clubs that there is no prospect of breaking into the world series. In addition the fans are no longer interested in the race and the attendance is showing the effect.

The magnates' desire to increase attendance was demonstrated yesterday when National league games between Chicago and Brokolyn and New York and Cincinnati were postponed because of "threatening weather"—a new departure in major league ball. The postponements enabled the scheduling of doubleheaders between the clubs today, a procedure calculated to aid Saturday gate receipts.

Another National league game between St. Louis and Philadelphia was rained out, leaving the Pitsburgh-Boston tilt as the only contest played. Boston won, 2 to 1, with Ben Cantwell besting Ervin Brame in a mound duel.

American league competition saw Boston and Chicago joining Detroit in the ranks of mathematically eliminated clubs. The Red Sox and White Sox now are 37 games behind the Athletics and could do no better than tie for first if they won all of their remaining 37 games while Philadelphia was losing its 40 remaining contests.

Philadelphia strengthened its position with a 15 to 12 victory over Chicago. The A's made only 10 hits but were aided by 10 walks and 3 Chicago errors.

Detroit scored seven runs in the seventh and eighth innings to defeat Boston 11 to 5.

Home runs by Babe Ruth and Lou Gehrig aided the New York Yankees in defeating St. Louis, 11 to 7. Ruth's 35th homer of the year and the 600th of his major league career, and Gehrig's 24th homer of the season, featured the Yanks five run rally in the third.

Washington defeated Cleveland, 6 to 3, with Lloyd Brown holding the Indians to six hits.

Jim Flynn Benefit Boxing Show Failure, 25 Cents in the Red

Phoenix, Ariz., Aug. 22.—(U.P.) — Jim Flynn, the only man who ever knocked out Jack Dempsey, was 25 cents poorer today because a bunch of his old friends got together and held a benefit boxing show for him.

Flynn, a great fighter in his day, has almost lost his eyesight and is practically without funds. Some of his friends decided to hold the benefit to raise money for an operation. Jim Jeffries, former world's champion, flew from California to referee and help draw a crowd. The crowd did not turn out, however, and an auditor's statement disclosed today that the expenses were 25 cents more than the gate receipts.

TERRY, SIMMONS TRY TO KEEP BATTING HONORS

WON MAJOR LEAGUE CROWNS IN 1930 SEASON

STATISTICS TODAY GIVE SIMMONS A PERCENTAGE OF .385

TERRY RALLIES AFTER A SLOW START AND NOW RECORDS .346

By DIXON STEWART
United(Press Staff Correspondent)

New York, Aug. 22—(U.P.)—Billy Terry, New York Giants first baseman, and Al Simmons Philadelphia Athletic outfielder, are making a strong bid to retain their majojr league batting championships won in 1930.

Statistics issued today and including games on Thursday, Aug. 20, show Simmons leading the American league with a percentage of .385, four points above his winning average of 1930. Terry, who topped the National league last season at .401, has rallied after a slow start and now is in second place in the senior circuit with an average of .346. Terry climbed from third to second place during the last week and now is only eight percentage points behind Virgil Davis, Phillies catcher who has been near the top since the start of the season. Chuck Klein, Phillis outfielder, is in third place with .344.

Babe Ruth is runner up to Simmons in the American league with an average of .371 and Eddie Morgan, Cleveland first baseman, is third at .355.

Gehrig of the Yankees and Klein of the Phillis continued to hold the lion's share of individual offensive honors.

Lefty Grove of the Athletics tops the pitchers for both leagues with 25 victories and 2 defeats for a percentage of .926, while Jess Haine's 10 victories and three defeats for .769 headed the National league.

BABE RUTH GETS 600TH HOME RUN OF HIS CAREER

St. Louis, Aug. 22.—(U.P.) — Babe Ruth hit the 600th home run of his career here yesterday, then paid $10 for the ball he had just knocked out of Sportsman's Park.

After trotting around the bases in the peculiar lumbering lope with which every baseball fan in America is familiar, Ruth had the announcer make known he would like to have the ball as a souvenir and would pay $10 for it.

A few minutes later, 10-year-old Tommy Callico hurried into the park, handed the ball to Ruth and was given a $10 bill in exchange.

TEAMS TIE AGAIN, REPLAY MONDAY

SOUTHSIDE AND Y. M. C. A. FIGHT TO 2 TO 2 TIE LAST EVENING

The South Side and the Y. M. C. A. may eventually have to toss a coin to determine which team is the winner.

Recently the teams played to a 6 to 6 tie. The teams met again last night to play off the tie.

Again the teams battled on even terms last evening, the game ending 2 to 2.

Monday evening another attempt will be made to break the tie. If the South Side wins it will play Northeast for the championship of the second half city league.

BILLY BURKE

GOLF is Scottish in name only nowadays. The game has long since become international in scope. It is quite in keeping with this modern trend that a Lithuanian with a self-chosen Irish name should be the present National Open Champion.

William Burkowski, who shortened his handle to Billy Burke when he took up competitive golf, is a fellow-countryman of that other famous Lithuanian, "Playful Jack" Sharkey, whose original monicker has been spelled with every possible combination of letters from Cuckoschay to Zukauskas.

Unlike the Boston Bad Boy, however, Burke is excellingly popular, and his rise to fame appeals to the imagination like an Alger yarn. Reclaimed from the steel and brass mills of Connecticut, his conquest in the greatest of all golf championships climaxed a steady rise from caddy beginnings, one complicated by episodes that other illustrious ex-caddies such as Hagen, Sarazen, Diegel and Farrell never knew. Even after Burke had turned pro his progress for a time was so slow that he went back to work again as a foreman in a bottling works at Bridgeport.

Now, after a stretch of brilliant play which started with the Ryder Cup qualifying and continued through the U. S. Open with the famous 144-hole duel with George Von Elm, Burke is on the heights. The double act that panicked the folks at Toledo is now being put on exhibition for the fans in other sections—Burke and Von Elm are touring the country together.

This barnstorming tour will give the golf addicts of the country their first chance to make the acquaintance of Burke, for he has emerged without a long introductory career of roving. He played in several national Opens and has participated in the Winter tours, but in contrast with Sarazen, Hagen, Armour or Von Elm he has been a stay-at-home. That accounts in great measure for his success; he is a bear for solitary practice.

When the boys line up for the P. G. A. tee party next month at Providence, Billy Burke will be the man to beat and it won't be very easy to beat him.

The Breaks of the Game

By HARDIN BURNLEY

© 1931, King Features Syndicate, Inc., Great Britain rights reserved.

NOW that the annoying Mr. Jones is out of the way, almost anyone of fifteen or twenty golfers can cop the national amateur championship this year.

The annual golf classic, scheduled to come off late this month at Beverly Hills in Chicago, will be "wide open," the nearest thing to a free-for-all that we've had in many a year.

Incidentally, there will be a very strong Western contingent among those present at Beverly. The East learned to its sorrow how formidable the Western delegation is when the Pebble Beach massacre of the seeded entries occurred in September, 1929. Chicago is a lot nearer the Coast than Merion, the 1930 battleground; and with the sectional qualifying rounds which went into effect this season, the Pacific Coast will have an even stronger representation.

Dr. Willing, Frank Dolp, Charlie Seaver, Chandler Egan and the rest are likely to make the Pacific Coast appreciated in the National, and the West can claim another dangerous contender in the person of Johnny Goodman, the Nebraska ace who first won fame as the conqueror of Bobby Jones two years ago. Goodman led Harrison Johnston and all the other amateurs in the St. Paul Open last month, and turned in the second best card of all the qualifiers in the nation-wide sectional trials for the national amateur. His 72—73—72—70—287 at Keller has rarely been surpassed by any amateur in a recognized medal championship.

The tragedy of the new sectional qualifying tests was the failure of young Don Moe to make the grade at Seattle. Moe would have been one of the Far West's best bets at Chicago. Last month he played brilliantly to win the Western amateur, which is second only in importance to the National. The manifest unfairness of the sectional tests is nowhere better shown than in Moe's case. His 149 wasn't good enough to get in at Seattle, where the number of competitors was small and the quality very high. One hundred and sixty-four was fast enough to qualify at Detroit. Moe's score was fifteen strokes lower than that of others who qualified elsewhere.

'SYNTHETIC' DOUBLEHEADERS TO BOLSTER ATTENDANCE

BASEBALL OWNERS ADOPTING THIS NEW EXPEDIENT

ONE-SIDED PENNANT RACES DETRACTING FROM INTEREST IN MAJORS

RIVAL CLUBS ARE CONVINCED THERE IS NO PROSPECT BREAKING INTO WORLD SERIES

By L. S. CAMERON
(United Press Sports Editor)

New York, Aug. 22—(U.P.)—With one-sided pennant races detracting from interest in major league baseball, club owners are resorting to the expedient of "synthetic" doubleheaders to bolster attendance.

Philadelphia's 13-game lead in the American league and St. Louis' 9 1-2 game margin in the National have convinced owners of rival clubs that there is no prospect of breaking into the world series. In addition the fans are no longer interested in the race and the attendance is showing the effect.

The magnates' desire to increase attendance was demonstrated yesterday when National league games between Chicago and Brokolyn and New York and Cincinnati were postponed because of "threatening weather"—a new departure in major league ball. The postponements enabled the scheduling of doubleheaders between the clubs today, a procedure calculated to aid Saturday gate receipts.

Another National league game between St. Louis and Philadelphia was rained out, leaving the Pitsburgh-Boston tilt as the only contest played. Boston won, 2 to 1, with Ben Cantwell besting Ervin Brame in a mound duel.

American league competition saw Boston and Chicago joining Detroit in the ranks of mathematically eliminated clubs. The Red Sox and White Sox now are 37 games behind the Athletics and could do no better than tie for first if they won all of their remaining 37 games while Philadelphia was losing its 40 remaining contests.

Philadelphia strengthened its position with a 15 to 12 victory over Chicago. The A's made only 10 hits but were aided by 10 walks and 3 Chicago errors.

Detroit scored seven runs in the seventh and eighth innings to defeat Boston 11 to 5.

Home runs by Babe Ruth and Lou Gehrig aided the New York Yankees in defeating St. Louis, 11 to 7. Ruth's 35th homer of the year and the 600th of his major league career, and Gehrig's 24th homer of the season, featured the Yanks five run rally in the third.

Washington defeated Cleveland, 6 to 3, with Lloyd Brown holding the Indians to six hits.

Jim Flynn Benefit Boxing Show Failure, 25 Cents in the Red

Phoenix, Ariz., Aug. 22.—(U.P.) — Jim Flynn, the only man who ever knocked out Jack Dempsey, was 25 cents poorer today because a bunch of his old friends got together and held a benefit boxing show for him.

Flynn, a great fighter in his day, has almost lost his eyesight and is practically without funds. Some of his friends decided to hold the benefit to raise money for an operation. Jim Jeffries, former world's champion, flew from California to referee and help draw a crowd. The crowd did not turn out, however, and an auditor's statement disclosed today that the expenses were 25 cents more than the gate receipts.

TERRY, SIMMONS TRY TO KEEP BATTING HONORS

WON MAJOR LEAGUE CROWNS IN 1930 SEASON

STATISTICS TODAY GIVE SIMMONS A PERCENTAGE OF .385

TERRY RALLIES AFTER A SLOW START AND NOW RECORDS .346

By DIXON STEWART
United(Press Staff Correspondent)

New York, Aug. 22—(U.P.)—Billy Terry, New York Giants first baseman, and Al Simmons Philadelphia Athletic outfielder, are making a strong bid to retain their majojr league batting championships won in 1930.

Statistics issued today and including games on Thursday, Aug. 20, show Simmons leading the American league with a percentage of .385, four points above his winning average of 1930. Terry, who topped the National league last season at .401, has rallied after a slow start and now is in second place in the senior circuit with an average of .346. Terry climbed from third to second place during the last week and now is only eight percentage points behind Virgil Davis, Phillies catcher who has been near the top since the start of the season. Chuck Klein, Phillis outfielder, is in third place with .344.

Babe Ruth is runner up to Simmons in the American league with an average of .371 and Eddie Morgan, Cleveland first baseman, is third at .355.

Gehrig of the Yankees and Klein of the Phillis continued to hold the lion's share of individual offensive honors.

Lefty Grove of the Athletics tops the pitchers for both leagues with 25 victories and 2 defeats for a percentage of .926, while Jess Haine's 10 victories and three defeats for .769 headed the National league.

EX-CONVICT KILLS HIMSELF FOR LOVE

Attempt to Regain Lost Happiness is Failure.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—The last chapter in an ex-convict's attempt to regain the happiness he once had known was written with the man's suicide in the home of the woman he had loved in vain.

Nathan Corna, forty-five, Pittsburgh, paroled last December from Marquette (Mich.) prison, where he had been sentenced for killing a woman in Detroit, killed himself in the home of Mrs. Dora Ritt, a widow. For six weeks Corna had sought to win the love of Mrs. Ritt, she said.

Corna told her of his prison sentence, Mrs. Ritt said.

"If I had loved him, I could have forgotten and forgiven—but without love, it was hopeless," she said.

As Corna finished his story and was about to leave, he slashed his throat, Mrs. Ritt said.

"Corna told me he had gone to Detroit from Pittsburgh when a young man and met a former Pittsburgh girl who was married and had one child," she added. "He said he fell in love with her.

"One day the woman was found dead and Corna was accused of the crime. For two years the case was fought in Michigan courts and he finally was sentenced to life imprisonment. He begged me to believe him innocent."

Doctors at Last Solve Puzzle of Boy's Illness

Harrisburg, Ga.—Doctors of the Harrisburg hospital believe they have correctly diagnosed the mysterious ailment which has confined Mark Enders, sixteen, Halifax, Pa., to the hospital for more than two months.

Enders was admitted last April when he was found unconscious while fighting a forest fire. He was treated for smoke suffocation.

He showed no signs of improvement and seemed to be a victim of hemolysis, in which the red corpuscles of the blood dissolve.

Other physicians diagnosed his ailment as 'purpura hemorrhagica" and treated him accordingly. He was delirious at times. Hemorrhages broke out at several points and his skin at times flushed red and oozed blood.

Blood transfusions were given and for several days thereafter the boy rallied. Later he sank back into a semi-comatose state.

Other diagnoses were made and other treatments applied.

One day a veteran physician reached the conclusion that Enders had been bitten by a snake, or a noxious insect.

So a form of treatment to arrest such a condition is now being applied, and the physicians believe that they are on the right track at last.

Africans Send Money to Starving Americans

New York.—A collection raised by black natives in the village of Batanga, in Cameroun, West Africa, to "help the starving in America" was received by the board of foreign missions of the Presbyterian church. With the check came a letter from a Presbyterian missionary, Rev. Albert D. Good, saying:

"A month or so ago there was a little article in the Bulu news sheet, 'The Mefoe,' telling of the hard times in America, and indicating that there were actually people in America who did not have enough to eat. This particular item caught the attention of Pastor Eduma Musambi and his son, Musambi, and they decided to give something for the starving people in America. They quietly told the church people about it, and, entirely of their own volition, a sum of money was gathered, which I inclose to you."

The inclosed check was for $2.77

Arms Against Self

By a peculiar coincidence, Brig.-Gen. Jacob F. Wolters (above), who was placed in command of troops in the areas comprising four counties under martial law in the East Texas oil fields, is an attorney for the Texas Company, one of the major oil operating firms in the Lone Star State. General Wolters was ordered into the oil area by Governor Ross S. Sterling to halt production in order that prices might be raised.

Deportation Next

Charles Ponzi, king of the "get-rich-quick" boys, is slated for deportation to Italy as soon as he is paroled from the Massachusetts State prison, probably in October. The Federal Department of Labor, in announcing Ponzi's enforced change of residence, stated a warrant of deportation was now facing the "financial wizard" and would be served immediately after he was paroled.

A WORN OUT MOP

An Old Pal Back on Job

Jack Dempsey, former heavyweight champion, is shown with his faithful trainer of many years, Jerry Luvadis, at Dempsey's training camp at Reno, Nevada, where Jack is getting back into shape, evidently for a comeback. It was little Jerry (the Greek) who gave Dempsey orders in his championship days, and it's Jerry who is again bossing the big fellow. Dempsey always has been the champ to Jerry.

The Stinson monoplane, equipped with pontoons, in which Edwin L. Preston (left) and Robert Colignon (right), air mail pilots, will retrace the route which Parker Cramer took to his apparent death over the great route of the North, is shown with its crew. The airmen hope from Detroit, as Cramer and his radio operator did, to survey northern route to Denmark in the interest of establishing an air mail line from America to the north of Europe via Greenland and Iceland.

Happy Triangular Romance

One of the strangest romances of the world will culminate soon when June Ramsay (left), once the toast of Broadway, marries her former husband's best friend—the friend who was best man at her wedding. And, just to make it a bit more bizarre, the wedding will take place aboard the former husband's yacht, the Alegria, with the former mate acting as best man. June Ramsay, theatrical star of 18 years ago, wed Adolph Erdmann (right), wealthy coal merchant, nearly two decades ago. The bridegroom-to-be, who was best man for June and Adolph, is Sabino de Barreneschea Maraschio, (lower left), millionaire sugar planter of Havana.

When Charles Chaplin, film comedian, appeared at a fashionable hotel of Biarritz recently with his "Lady of Mystery" he introduced her as Miss Mary Reeves. Since Chaplin and Miss Reeves have been seen together numerous places dining and dancing, Dame Rumor has been busy spreading the gospel that the couple is soon to listen to wedding bells. They're happy in each other's company as they sup in Biarritz.

Ruth Thatcher, of Baltimore, Md., is shown holding the hand which bridge experts claim only one person in five million has a chance of drawing—yes, sir, the perfect bridge hand. In a friendly game with three of her young friends, Miss Thatcher picked up her cards and looked in astonishment at thirteen spades! Pretty cards, aren't they? Well, what'll you bid?

Being Happy Fashionable

Saying one is happy seems to be the proper thing in China, recording to Dr. Randolph Sailer, psychologist at Yenching university. Of 500 workers questioned, only 60 admitted that their happiness was below par, and none was a complete pessimist. Happiness is not affected by money, education or jobs, Doctor Sailer and his co-workers found. Smokers and non-smokers both were happy. And married men were happier, as a rule, than bachelors.

"DoubleCrossing"

Doctor Vizetelly says that a New York boss in the early '80s testified before an investigating committee that when a constituent asked a favor he made a record of the name and fact that if he intended to grant the petition he marked a cross after the name. Sometimes he would change his mind, in which case he added a second cross. In his testimony he would say, "I crossed Smith; I double-crossed Jones." Possibly this is the origin of the expression "double-cross" as used today.

EX-CONVICT KILLS HIMSELF FOR LOVE

Attempt to Regain Lost Happiness is Failure.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—The last chapter in an ex-convict's attempt to regain the happiness he once had known was written with the man's suicide in the home of the woman he had loved in vain.

Nathan Corna, forty-five, Pittsburgh, paroled last December from Marquette (Mich.) prison, where he had been sentenced for killing a woman in Detroit, killed himself in the home of Mrs. Dora Ritt, a widow. For six weeks Corna had sought to win the love of Mrs. Ritt, she said.

Corna told her of his prison sentence, Mrs. Ritt said.

"If I had loved him, I could have forgotten and forgiven—but without love, it was hopeless," she said.

As Corna finished his story and was about to leave, he slashed his throat, Mrs. Ritt said.

"Corna told me he had gone to Detroit from Pittsburgh when a young man and met a former Pittsburgh girl who was married and had one child," she added. "He said he fell in love with her.

"One day the woman was found dead and Corna was accused of the crime. For two years the case was fought in Michigan courts and he finally was sentenced to life imprisonment. He begged me to believe him innocent."

Doctors at Last Solve Puzzle of Boy's Illness

Harrisburg, Ga.—Doctors of the Harrisburg hospital believe they have correctly diagnosed the mysterious ailment which has confined Mark Enders, sixteen, Halifax, Pa., to the hospital for more than two months.

Enders was admitted last April when he was found unconscious while fighting a forest fire. He was treated for smoke suffocation.

He showed no signs of improvement and seemed to be a victim of hemolysis, in which the red corpuscles of the blood dissolve.

Other physicians diagnosed his ailment as 'purpura hemorrhagica" and treated him accordingly. He was delirious at times. Hemorrhages broke out at several points and his skin at times flushed red and oozed blood.

Blood transfusions were given and for several days thereafter the boy rallied. Later he sank back into a semi-comatose state.

Other diagnoses were made and other treatments applied.

One day a veteran physician reached the conclusion that Enders had been bitten by a snake, or a noxious insect.

So a form of treatment to arrest such a condition is now being applied, and the physicians believe that they are on the right track at last.

Africans Send Money to Starving Americans

New York.—A collection raised by black natives in the village of Batanga, in Cameroun, West Africa, to "help the starving in America" was received by the board of foreign missions of the Presbyterian church. With the check came a letter from a Presbyterian missionary, Rev. Albert D. Good, saying:

"A month or so ago there was a little article in the Bulu news sheet, 'The Mefoe,' telling of the hard times in America, and indicating that there were actually people in America who did not have enough to eat. This particular item caught the attention of Pastor Eduma Musambi and his son, Musambi, and they decided to give something for the starving people in America. They quietly told the church people about it, and, entirely of their own volition, a sum of money was gathered, which I inclose to you."

The inclosed check was for $9.77.

By a peculiar coincidence, Brig.-Gen. Jacob F. Wolters (above), who was placed in command of troops in the areas comprising four counties under martial law in the East Texas oil fields, is an attorney for the Texas Company, one of the major oil operating firms in the Lone Star State. General Wolters was ordered into the oil area by Governor Ross S. Sterling to halt production in order that prices might be raised.

CAR HITS CHILD CROSSING STREET

Betty Thompson Knocked Unconscious in Accident on Sixth Street This Noon

X-Ray examination was to be made this afternoon at the St. Joseph's hospital to determine injuries received by Betty Thompson, 5 years old, struck by a car at noon as she crossed Sixth street from the Lincoln school playgrounds to the home of her uncle, Robert Peterson, 623 South 6th street.

The child is believed not seriously hurt although she received head and body injuries which rendered her unconscious. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Thompson, residing ten miles southeast of Brainerd.

The car was being driven slowly and came to a stop immediately after hitting the child, witnesses reported. F. J. Kemper, Minneapolis, driver, took the child to a doctor's office. She was removed from there to the hospital.

NEW YORK BANDIT FIGHT IS BLOODIEST IN ANNALS

Other innocent bystanders lay wounded in the trail of the cars.

The bandits swung over into Manhattan from the Bronx, saw speeding police headed their way and turned. They were virtually surrounded.

And as the killers cab swung into Dyckman street, a huge motor truck backed out of a driveway, blocking the roadway.

Police closed in. They riddled the bandit car, deliberately.

Intact in a satchel lying crumbled in the cab they found the $4,619, "The Stake" in the bloody battle of the Bronx.

NEW YORK DECLARES NEW WAR ON GANGDOM

New York, Aug. 22—(U.P.)—New York citizens today declared a new war on gangdom—a war to "make the streets safe for civilization." The action followed the most outrageous assault on society ever perpetrated by crime-crazed bandits in greater New York.

Thirty thousand veterans of the western front in France stood ready to match shotguns of the underworld with rifles, revolvers and bombs and bayonets.

A hundred thousand private citizens, preparing for a mass meeting next Monday, were ready to offer themselves to avenge the killing of two patrolmen, one three-year-old child, and the wounding of 11 other innocent spectators along the 15-mile bloody trail from the Manhattan to the Bronx yesterday.

The newspapers joined the cry.

In the mad chase of the two gunmen who opened their orgy of gunfire with a cold-blooded assassination of Patrolman Walter J. Webb, guarding a payroll, the courage of the city's armed forces was matched by the heroism of private citizens who, for 15 miles, faced a rain of bullets from the outlaw's murder car, to run them to the ground and haul them, riddled to death, from their running fortress.

It was upon this heroism, upon this determination to wipe out the last murderous, baby-killing outlaws in New York that newspapers today stirred their readers to a new crusading spirit. The public ,it was emphasized, has begun to fight back.

If the horror at seeing men and women shot down, and the sorrow of watching a small girl's life ebb away in a hospital were foremost in New York minds today, a secondary and more consoling thought gave the city courage—the two bandits and their taxi driver, who may or may not have been associated with them, were dead.

The "baby-killers" of three weeks ago, the men who sprayed a street full of playing children with underworld vengeance—slugs—have never been captured.

Of the 11 wounded victims now in New York hospitals, all but one will recover, according to hospital authorities. The condition of traffic officer, David Lewis, who carried several bullets in his body, was considered "very grave."

Versatile Dix Finds Notable New Film Role

"Is there no limit to the man's versatility?

That is the question on every film patron's lips after seeing Richard Dix as Jim Donovan, square-jawed, virile gang-leader, in "Young Donovan's Kid" from Rex Beach's famous novel "Big Brother," which opens at the Palace theatre midnight performance tonight.

Even while the press and theatres of the world are still shouting paeans of praise over his sensational characterization of Yancey Cravat, the flamboyant, romantic, two-gun editor and dreamer in "Cimarron," Dix steps into a radically different type of role—that of a dangerous crook in the harsh surroundings of New York's gangland of 1910, and delivers a performance equally as inspired.

From the time Dix sticks his formidable chin under the murderous Monk Mantilla's nose and says "Yeah?", until the exciting fadeout in "Big Brother," he is a cyclone of action, a creature of primitive human emotions, and an artist completely absorbed in his work.

"I loved that part," Dix explained. "Ever since I read the novel years ago, it has been my ambition to bring it to the screen. What is a finer motif for any story than that of the regeneration of a sordid soul?"

Old Custom

"How did the old saying, 'I paid him down on the nail' arise?" has been asked. "Nails" are metal pillars still to be found in ancient exchanges and over which bargains were struck. They are still to be seen at Bristol and elsewhere.

MAIL ROBBERY AT AUSTIN, MINN., POUCHES STOLEN

2 BANDITS PULL IGNITION KEY FROM MOVING MAIL TRUCK

TRANSFER SACKS TO THEIR OWN AUTOMOBILE AND SPEED AWAY

Austin, Minn., Aug. 22—(U.P.)—Pulling the ignition key from his moving mail truck, two bandits today stopped Cyril Maloney, mail messenger and robbed him of a pouch and mail sack.

The two pouches were to be delivered at the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul and Pacific railroad depot. No immediate estimate of the value of the mail could be given.

The men apparently had been waiting for Maloney. As his truck slowed down for a corner, one of the men appeared on either side of him and climbed aboard.

"Stop this thing, now!" one of them ordered.

The other pulled out the ignition key and applied the hand brake. Both men had revolvers in their hands. Maloney raised his hands above his hands above his head and the robbers took the two mail containers.

Their own automobile was close at hand and they transferred the pouch and sack to it. Maloney said they sped away westward toward Albert Lea.

County authorities were notified and posses were organized for pursuit.

Porcelain was not made in England until almost the middle of the Eighteenth century. Earthenware was manufactured earlier than the Eighteenth century. Potters were at work at Staffordshire in the Seventeenth century.

PICTURE RELEASES SHOW NEW TREND

Films in New Season to Afford Relief to Tired Brain; Honest Laughs and Thrills

Motion picture producers are through with ultra-sophisticated plots and stories. Honest that's the lowdown from none other than Harry Greenberg, manager of the Paramount theatre, who lets us in on the confidential tip that the film world is going "domestic."

No, no, not with stories that tell of Hollywood homelife or Reno divorces, but with the types of pictures that the public is craving, films which make you forget about the wage cut, the grasshopper plague, hot weather and international moratoriums.

Here it is straight from Manager Harry Greenberg. "The Movie New Year is about to start and the pictures coming are the sort that will give theatre fans of Brainerd lots of thrills, honest laughs and generous heart palpitations."

What actually has happened is that Paramount Publix and the other picture producers are through with scenarios that deal with inhibitions, perversions, psychoanalysis, and the rest. Now we are going to see the pictures that will be a recreation for those of us who wish to give our brains some rest and relaxation starting at 5 p. m. or thereabout.

The old stars are with us, and some new ones tucked in here and there. The first crack out of the box is "The Smiling Lieutenant" which is sweeping the country and doing a lot to kill any depression that might have settled on the motion picture business. "The big shot" is Maurice Chevalier, who gets a big helping hand from Claudette Colbert, Charlie Ruggles, Miriam Hopkins and George Barber, all under the directorial genius of Ernest Lubitsch. Beyond any argument, Maurice is at his best in "The Smiling Lieutenant."

Another picture in the movement toward getting us down to earth is Theodore Dreiser's "An American Tragedy" which reels along without any sophistication, continental settings, smart-aleck dialogue or bawdiness. Most everyone will be astonished by the bold sweep of this drama. The leading players are Phillips Holmes, Sylvia Sidney, Frances Dee and Irving Pichel and their work is reported to be immense.

Next in line is "Huckleberry Finn" in which is starred the same cast as played in 'Tom Sawyer." This picture takes us all out of the woods and to the woodshed for a little session, and the reaction is bound to be a wholesome and enjoyable one, for there probably isn't a man, woman, boy or girl who won't get a big kick out of this masterpiece by Mark Twain.

Then come the Marx Brothers who are "on again and off again" in "Monkey Business." The show is certainly fresh from the zoo and, good news, it dosen't have any musical comedy inserted into it. We understand the gags follow so fast and furiously that another laugh starts before the first one is finished.

From the ridiculous to the sublime, George Arliss, supreme in "Disraeli" and "The Millionaire" returns with a new picture "Alexander Hamilton." Doris Kenyon, June Collyer, Dudley Diggs, Ralf Harolde, Alan Mowbray and Montague Love find themselves in the cast with the screen's greatest actor.

Then comes Edward G. Robinson, doing away with his role of gangtser, gambler and the like, to be the big moment in "Five Star Final." The picture is credited with jolting Broadway from end to end and that's something for a love yarn.

Of course Greta Garbo is in the line-up in her last picture 'The Rise of Susan Lenox," a best seller story. Her leading man will be Clark Gable.

Other outstanding productions follow in fast succession, among them Joan Crawford's latest, "This Modern Age" with Neil Hamilton and Marjorie Rambeau. That priceless pair, Marie Dressler and Polly Moran go in for "Politics" in which Marie leads a woman's strike that covers all phases of wifely duties. Fifi Dorsey, who claims that Will Rogers is her big excitement, comes along with Will in "Young As You Feel." The romantic couple, Janet Gaynor and Charles Farrell will romance to your heart's content in "Merely Mary Ann."

Of course all these pictures will not be shown in the order given here but they are all just about ready for release and they head the feast of entertainment for "Movie New Year." Truly "happy days are here again" for movie fans!

In the picture business, Manager Harry Greenberg pointed out, the new season usually begins in August. At this time—just as automobile dealers, in their season announce their new models, and department stores their new fall styles, all picture companies announce their new product for the coming year. Manager Greenberg having just received his list of coming attractions and it was on this list that he based his optimistic predictions.

MOUNDS INSPECTED AT CAMP'S FARM

OLD HISTORICAL SITE IS SCENE OF SUCCESSFUL GATHERING OF COUNTY SOCIETY

The annual outing of the County Historical Society, Thursday, was decidedly a success, from every standpoint. The pleasure and interest afforded by this one yearly event would justify the maintaining of the society, if nothing else was accomplished, which of course is far from being the case.

The caravan, led by Sam R. Adair, left Brainerd promptly at 9:30 a. m. and was augmented at Merrifield and several other points along the route to the old "Dr. Camp" farm at Mission. When the Centre township farm unit joined them at their distination there was a good sized gathering under the old trees of the farm pasture, where the picnic dinner was eaten.

On the way in, the caravan had halted for inspection of the ancient mounds for which the farm is noted, and the old wooden posts erected by the late Dr. J. L. Camp and J. V. Brower in 1897, to mark the site of the ancient village, were pointed out by Mr. Adair and President H. I. Cohen, who had previously inspected and laid out the route, and Robert Jordan, now on a farm near Parkerville but for many of his younger years employed by Dr. Camp on the old farm, had much of interest to tell about the erection of the markers and the excavations made by the Camp-Brower party.

"Some of the larger mounds were opened and many interesting things removed—arrowheads, stone implements and human bones, jaw and thigh bones of remarkable size, twice as large as those of the average man of our period," said Mr. Jordan, and one recalls that Dr. Camp gave a fine collection of such things to the Natural History Museum of New York City, so it is quite safe to assume that some of them came from these mounds. Mrs. Florence Fleming, the society's treasurer, distinctly remembers that Mr. Brower carried away some of the bones found at that time, which was, according to Mr. Jordan, about 1895.

The old original markers are to be carefully lifted from where they have fallen, and placed in the museum in the old court house. New markers resembling those placed at Ft. Poualok will be erected by the society at an early date, and every effort will be made to protect the mounds from excavation by any but scientists, who are bound to find this region an interesting field for study.

Clarence Converse, whose farm closely approaches the Camp farm says: "Major Ruffy, former Indian agent here located the site of the old German-Lutheran mission, founded by Rev. Ottmar Cloeter, of Saginaw, Mich., in 1857, as directly in front of the present farm house on the Camp farm. While doing some digging, for fenceposts one day for Dr. Camp, I found a heavy old key on this spot, among the ashes of an old building, without doubt the old mission itself. I also found several pieces of yellowed ivory, which I took to be piano keys, but Rev. Cloeter's granddaughter now tells me the mission boasted an organ, which must have been destroyed in this fire." Mr. Converse then presented the key to the society for the museum.

Rev. Cloeter's granddaughter, Mrs. Boese, drove with her husband from their home in Montevideo, Minn., to attend this picnic, expecting that her uncle, Rev. Cloeter of Vernon Center, son of the first Rev. Cloeter, would be present as speaker of the day; but the venerable gentleman, born at the mission in 1859, decided the journey would be too wearisome for one of his years, and in place of his address, Judge L. B. Kinder of Brainerd read a letter from him, and supplemented it with all that his own researches of state archives could afford. We quote from Rev. Cloeter's letter:

"My father arrived at the Indian Mission in June, 1857, building a log house that summer, and taking up his residence with his wife and three children there during the fall of the same year. He named the station 'Gabitaweegama,' meaning 'Parallel Waters,' referring to the fact that the Mission lakes run parallel to the Mississippi.

"From this station he worked among the Rabbit lake Indians, and also among the other tribes. When the Indian war broke out in 1862 he was compelled to seek refuge with his family at Ft. Ripley. The station was destroyed by the Pillagers of Leech Lake. He continued his work among the Indians until 1868, from headquarters established at Crow Wing. Gabitaweegama was never rebuilt."

The reading of this letter, and Judge Kinder's adress were a part of the informal program that followed the picnic dinner. Music was provided in the form of community singing, notably "We're Tenting Tonight on the Old Camp Ground," and by violin and banjo played by George Squires and Henry Stropp, a son of Fred Stropp, one of the early settlers of the region. Mrs. Bert Sabin gave a clever reading—"A Trip to the Maids," and President Cohen introduced to the gathering Fred Cowden of Geneva, O., and Center, Minn., also F. A. Gustafson of Pequot, both of whom had just been elected life members of the society, for services rendered in loaning exhibits at the museum. Mr. Gustafson made a short, impromptu speech, expressing his pleasure at receiving this unexpected recognition of his work as a collector and student of local history. Mr. Cohen also spoke the society's appreciation of the great kindness and hospitality shown by Mr. Boli and family, the present occupants of the farm, and by E. E. Taylor and other members of the Center township farm unit, who contributed so materially to the success of the event.

CAR HITS CHILD CROSSING STREET

Car Hits Child Crossing ✤? ✤? ✤?✤

Betty Thompson Knocked Unconscious in Accident on Sixth Street This Noon

X-Ray examination was to be made this afternoon at the St. Joseph's hospital to determine injuries received by Betty Thompson, 5 years old, struck by a car at noon as she crossed Sixth street from the Lincoln school playgrounds to the home of her uncle, Robert Peterson, 623 South 6th street.

The child is believed not seriously hurt although she received head and body injuries which rendered her unconscious. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Thompson, residing ten miles southeast of Brainerd.

The car was being driven slowly and came to a stop immediately after hitting the child, witnesses reported. F. J. Kemper, Minneapolis, driver, took the child to a doctor's office. She was removed from there to the hospital.

NEW YORK BANDIT FIGHT IS BLOODIEST IN ANNALS

Other innocent bystanders lay wounded in the trail of the cars.

The bandits swung over into Manhattan from the Bronx, saw speeding police headed their way and turned. They were virtually surrounded.

And as the killers cab swung into Dyckman street, a huge motor truck backed out of a driveway, blocking the roadway.

Police closed in. They riddled the bandit car, deliberately.

Intact in a satchel lying crumbled in the cab they found the $4,619, "The Stake" in the bloody battle of the Bronx.

NEW YORK DECLARES NEW WAR ON GANGDOM

New York, Aug. 22—(U.P.)—New York citizens today declared a new war on gangdom—a war to "make the streets safe for civilization." The action followed the most outrageous assault on society ever perpetrated by crime-crazed bandits in greater New York.

Thirty thousand veterans of the western front in France stood ready to match shotguns of the underworld with rifles, revolvers and bombs and bayonets.

A hundred thousand private citizens, preparing for a mass meeting next Monday, were ready to offer themselves to avenge the killing of two patrolmen, one three-year-old child, and the wounding of 11 other innocent spectators along the 15-mile bloody trail from the Manhattan to the Bronx yesterday.

The newspapers joined the cry.

In the mad chase of the two gunmen who opened their orgy of gunfire with a cold-blooded assassination of Patrolman Walter J. Webb, guarding a payroll, the courage of the city's armed forces was matched by the heroism of private citizens who, for 15 miles, faced a rain of bullets from the outlaw's murder car, to run them to the ground and haul them, riddled to death, from their running fortress.

It was upon this heroism, upon this determination to wipe out the last murderous, baby-killing outlaws in New York that newspapers today stirred their readers to a new crusading spirit. The public it was emphasized, has begun to fight back.

If the horror at seeing men and women shot down, and the sorrow of watching a small girl's life ebb away in a hospital were foremost in New York minds today, a secondary and more consoling thought gave the city courage—the two bandits and their taxi driver, who may or may not have been associated with them, were dead.

The "baby-killers" of three weeks ago, the men who sprayed a street full of playing children with underworld vengeance—slugs—have never been captured.

Of the 11 wounded victims now in New York hospitals, all but one will recover, according to hospital authorities. The condition of traffic officer, David Lewis, who carried several bullets in his body, was considered "very grave."

Versatile Dix Finds Notable New Film Role

"Is there no limit to the man's versatility?

That is the question on every film patron's lips after seeing Richard Dix as Jim Donovan, square-jawed, virile gang-leader, in "Young Donovan's Kid" from Rex Beach's famous novel "Big Brother," which opens at the Palace theatre midnight performance tonight.

Even while the press and theatres of the world are still shouting paeans of praise over his sensational characterization of Yancey Cravat, the flamboyant, romantic, two-gun editor and dreamer in "Cimarron," Dix steps into a radically different type of role—that of a dangerous crook in the harsh surroundings of New York's gangland of 1910, and delivers a performance equally as inspired.

From the time Dix sticks his formidable chin under the murderous Monk Mantilla's nose and says "Yeah?", until the exciting fadeout in "Big Brother," he is a cyclone of action, a creature of primitive human emotions, and an artist completely absorbed in his work.

"I loved that part," Dix explained. "Ever since I read the novel years ago, it has been my ambition to bring it to the screen. What is a finer motif for any story than that of the regeneration of a sordid soul?"

MAIL ROBBERY AT AUSTIN, MINN., POUCHES STOLEN

2 BANDITS PULL IGNITION KEY FROM MOVING MAIL TRUCK

TRANSFER SACKS TO THEIR OWN AUTOMOBILE AND SPEED AWAY

Austin, Minn., Aug. 22—(U.P.)—Pulling the ignition key from his moving mail truck, two bandits today stopped Cyril Maloney, mail messenger and robbed him of a pouch and mail sack.

The two pouches were to be delivered at the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul and Pacific railroad depot. No immediate estimate of the value of the mail could be given.

The men apparently had been waiting for Maloney. As his truck slowed down for a corner, one of the men appeared on either side of him and climbed aboard.

"Stop this thing, now!" one of them ordered.

The other pulled out the ignition key and applied the hand brake. Both men had revolvers in their hands. Maloney raised his hands above his hands above his head and the robbers took the two mail containers.

Their own automobile was close at hand and they transferred the pouch and sack to it. Maloney said they sped away westward toward Albert Lea.

County authorities were notified and posses were organized for pursuit.

Films in New Season to Afford Relief to Tired Brain; Honest Laughs and Thrills

Motion picture producers are through with ultra-sophisticated plots and stories. Honest that's the lowdown from none other than Harry Greenberg, manager of the Paramount theatre, who lets us in on the confidential tip that the film world is going "domestic."

No, no, not with stories that tell of Hollywood homelife or Reno divorces, but with the types of pictures that the public is craving, films which make you forget about the wage cut, the grasshopper plague, hot weather and international moratoriums.

Here it is straight from Manager Harry Greenberg. "The Movie New Year is about to start and the pictures coming are the sort that will give theatre fans of Brainerd lots of thrills, honest laughs and generous heart palpitations."

What actually has happened is that Paramount Publix and the other picture producers are through with scenarios that deal with inhibitions, perversions, psychoanalysis, and the rest. Now we are going to see the pictures that will be a recreation for those of us who wish to give our brains some rest and relaxation starting at 5 p. m. or thereabout.

The old stars are with us, and some new ones tucked in here and there. The first crack out of the box is "The Smiling Lieutenant" which is sweeping the country and doing a lot to kill any depression that might have settled on the motion picture business. "The big shot" is Maurice Chevalier, who gets a big helping hand from Claudette Colbert, Charlie Ruggles, Miriam Hopkins and George Barber, all under the directorial genius of Ernest Lubitsch. Beyond any argument, Maurice is at his best in "The Smiling Lieutenant."

Another picture in the movement toward getting us down to earth is Theodore Dreiser's "An American Tragedy" which reels along without any sophistication, continental settings, smart-aleck dialogue or bawdiness. Most everyone will be astonished by the bold sweep of this drama. The leading players are Phillips Holmes, Sylvia Sidney, Frances Dee and Irving Pichel and their work is reported to be immense.

Next in line is "Huckleberry Finn" in which is starred the same cast as played in 'Tom Sawyer." This picture takes us all out of the woods and to the woodshed for a little session, and the reaction is bound to be a wholesome and enjoyable one, for there probably isn't a man, woman, boy or girl who won't get a big kick out of this masterpiece by Mark Twain.

Then come the Marx Brothers who are "on again and off again" in "Monkey Business." The show is certainly fresh from the zoo and, good news, it dosen't have any musical comedy inserted into it. We understand the gags follow so fast and furiously that another laugh starts before the first one is finished.

From the ridiculous to the sublime, George Arliss, supreme in "Disraeli" and "The Millionaire" returns with a new picture "Alexander Hamilton." Doris Kenyon, June Collyer, Dudley Diggs, Ralf Harolde, Alan Mowbray and Montague Love find themselves in the cast with the screen's greatest actor.

Then comes Edward G. Robinson, doing away with his role of gangtser, gambler and the like, to be the big moment in "Five Star Final." The picture is credited with jolting Broadway from end to end and that's something for a love yarn.

Of course Greta Garbo is in the line-up in her last picture 'The Rise of Susan Lenox," a best seller story. Her leading man will be Clark Gable.

Other outstanding productions follow in fast succession, among them Joan Crawford's latest, "This Modern Age" with Neil Hamilton and Marjorie Rambeau. That priceless pair, Marie Dressler and Polly Moran go in for "Politics" in which Marie leads a woman's strike that covers all phases of wifely duties. Fifi Dorsey, who claims that Will Rogers is her big excitement, comes along with Will in "Young As You Feel." The romantic couple, Janet Gaynor and Charles Farrell will romance to your heart's content in "Merely Mary Ann."

Of course all these pictures will not be shown in the order given here but they are all just about ready for release and they head the feast of entertainment for "Movie New Year." Truly "happy days are here again" for movie fans!

In the picture business, Manager Harry Greenberg pointed out, the new season usually begins in August. At this time—just as automobile dealers, in their season announce their new models, and department stores their new fall styles, all picture companies announce their new product for the coming year. Manager Greenberg having just received his list of coming attractions and it was on this list that he based his optimistic predictions.

MOUNDS INSPECTED AT CAMP'S FARM

OLD HISTORICAL SITE IS SCENE OF SUCCESSFUL GATHERING OF COUNTY SOCIETY

The annual outing of the County Historical Society, Thursday, was decidedly a success, from every standpoint. The pleasure and interest afforded by this one yearly event would justify the maintaining of the society, if nothing else was accomplished, which of course is far from being the case.

The caravan, led by Sam R. Adair, left Brainerd promptly at 9:30 a. m. and was augmented at Merrifield and several other points along the route to the old "Dr. Camp" farm at Mission. When the Centre township farm unit joined them at their distination there was a good sized gathering under the old trees of the farm pasture, where the picnic dinner was eaten.

On the way in, the caravan had halted for inspection of the ancient mounds for which the farm is noted, and the old wooden posts erected by the late Dr. J. L. Camp and J. V. Brower in 1897, to mark the site of the ancient village, were pointed out by Mr. Adair and President H. I. Cohen, who had previously inspected and laid out the route, and Robert Jordan, now on a farm near Parkerville but for many of his younger years employed by Dr. Camp on the old farm, had much of interest to tell about the erection of the markers and the excavations made by the Camp-Brower party.

"Some of the larger mounds were opened and many interesting things removed—arrowheads, stone implements and human bones, jaw and thigh bones of remarkable size, twice as large as those of the average man of our period," said Mr. Jordan, and one recalls that Dr. Camp gave a fine collection of such things to the Natural History Museum of New York City, so it is quite safe to assume that some of them came from these mounds. Mrs. Florence Fleming, the society's treasurer, distinctly remembers that Mr. Brower carried away some of the bones found at that time, which was, according to Mr. Jordan, about 1895.

The old original markers are to be carefully lifted from where they have fallen, and placed in the museum in the old court house. New markers resembling those placed at Ft. Poualok will be erected by the society at an early date, and every effort will be made to protect the mounds from excavation by any but scientists, who are bound to find this region an interesting field for study.

Clarence Converse, whose farm closely approaches the Camp farm says: "Major Ruffy, former Indian agent here located the site of the old German-Lutheran mission, founded by Rev. Ottmar Cloeter, of Saginaw, Mich., in 1857, as directly in front of the present farm house on the Camp farm. While doing some digging, for fenceposts one day for Dr. Camp, I found a heavy old key on this spot, among the ashes of an old building, without doubt the old mission itself. I also found several pieces of yellowed ivory, which I took to be piano keys, but Rev. Cloeter's granddaughter now tells me the mission boasted an organ, which must have been destroyed in this fire." Mr. Converse then presented the key to the society for the museum.

Rev. Cloeter's granddaughter, Mrs. Boese, drove with her husband from their home in Montevideo, Minn., to attend this picnic, expecting that her uncle, Rev. Cloeter of Vernon Center, son of the first Rev. Cloeter, would be present as speaker of the day; but the venerable gentleman, born at the mission in 1859, decided the journey would be too wearisome for one of his years, and in place of his address, Judge L. B. Kinder of Brainerd read a letter from him, and supplemented it with all that his own researches of state archives could afford. We quote from Rev. Cloeter's letter:

"My father arrived at the Indian Mission in June, 1857, building a log house that summer, and taking up his residence with his wife and three children there during the fall of the same year. He named the station 'Gabitaweegama,' meaning 'Parallel Waters,' referring to the fact that the Mission lakes run parallel to the Mississippi.

"From this station he worked among the Rabbit lake Indians, and also among the other tribes. When the Indian war broke out in 1862 he was compelled to seek refuge with his family at Ft. Ripley. The station was destroyed by the Pillagers of Leech Lake. He continued his work among the Indians until 1868, from headquarters established at Crow Wing. Gabitaweegama was never rebuilt."

The reading of this letter, and Judge Kinder's adress were a part of the informal program that followed the picnic dinner. Music was provided in the form of community singing, notably "We're Tenting Tonight on the Old Camp Ground," and by violin and banjo played by George Squires and Henry Stropp, a son of Fred Stropp, one of the early settlers of the region. Mrs. Bert Sabin gave a clever reading —"A Trip to the Maids," and President Cohen introduced to the gathering Fred Cowden of Geneva, O., and Center, Minn., also F. A. Gustafson of Pequot, both of whom had just been elected life members of the society, for services rendered in loaning exhibits at the museum. Mr. Gustafson made a short, impromptu speech, expressing his pleasure at receiving this unexpected recognition of his work as a collector and student of local history Mr. Cohen also spoke the society's appreciation of the great kindness and hospitality shown by Mr. Boli and family, the present occupants of the farm, and by E. E. Taylor and other members of the Center township farm unit, who contributed so materially to the success of the event.

"MAKE-BELIEVE" by FAITH BALDWIN

Copyright, 1930, by Faith Baldwin Distributed by King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Mary Lou Thurston, beautiful orphan, seeks a position in the home of wealthy Mrs. Margaret Lorrimer, when the latter's son, Travers, a shell-shocked war veteran, enters. At sight of Mary Lou he becomes wildly excited, takes her in his arms and calls her "Delight" and "wife." Later, Mrs. Lorrimer explains that Travers has mistaken Mary Lou for Delight Harford, whom he claims he married in England, but of whom no record can be found. Mrs. Lorrimer persuades Mary Lou to assume the role of Delight to help Travers regain his health. Travers is told that, as Delight was so young at the time of her marriage and had since thought him dead, they must start all over again. In her first encounter with Travers Mary Lou plays her part perfectly. Travers takes new interest in life. Mrs. Lorrimer hopes he will fall in love with Mary Lou. Travers believing Larry Mitchell, Mary Lou's friend, is in love with her, reminds Mary Lou that she is still his wife. At Christmas Travers' lack of the holiday spirit causes Mary Lou to call him ingrown and selfish.

CHAPTER XXIII.

"HOW you must hate me!" he said, involuntarily, almost in a whisper.

"I don't hate you," she flung back at him. "If I did I wouldn't take all this trouble! If I did—well, you wouldn't see me again, that's all! But it makes me tired, now that I've lived here in the house all these weeks and seen—what I've seen. Even if you can't really enter into your mother's plans for Christmas you might at least pretend a little—it couldn't hurt you and it would make her happy!"

"I suppose," Lorrimer answered after a moment, and he was perfectly white, so white that Mary Lou's heart misgave her. What if she had overstepped the limit! She and Mrs. Lorrimer and Doctor Mathews had often talked over the possible wisdom of giving Lorrimer a shock, of trying to shock him back to himself by sheer brutality of truth. But how white he was! "I suppose," he repeated, "you think me a pretty poor specimen. And naturally I'm not fool enough to think that my experience was worse than any other man's, nor as bad as that of many. But if I've become 'ingrown,' as you call it, why a lot of it was up to you—if I didn't care to get well, didn't care if I lived or died—it was considerably your fault," said Lorrimer.

"Mine," cried Mary Lou, almost forgetting her role for a moment. "Mine?"

All That Matters

"I loved you," he said somberly, "and you told me you loved me. I took that knowledge back to the front with me; it sustained me through all that happened afterward, through the long weeks in the prison camp. The knowledge of your love. That you belonged to me. That after it was all over we would be together again. For always."

Mary Lou thought hard and fast. Then she let him have it, her own Mary Lou-ish convictions, her complete and truthful opinion of the boy and girl love affair. She spoke in the person of Delight Harford, but whether the real Delight would have harbored such opinions Mary Lou neither knew nor cared.

"Look here, Lorry," she said, evenly, "we'll have this out . . . here and now. How old were you when we met? How old was I? A couple of crazy kids, thrown out of our normal stride by war, beglamoured and bewildered. You were in a dangerous service, you'd had months of it, your number might be up at any time. I—I lived in an atmosphere of war-mad desperation, frivolity, despair, sorrow, hectic gayety, alternating like moods. An epidemic, an air raid and my number might be up, too. Anyone was bound to fall in love, almost everyone did. You'd have fallen for the first pretty girl you saw after your weeks at the front, and I with the first presentable man. And we were full of a lot of romantic ideas about snatching at happiness, because the next day might be our last—" She paused for breath and to her astonishment Lorrimer nodded.

"Yes, you said just that," he told her, now. "I haven't forgotten, Delight."

War Madness

"That's how we all felt. It was—madness, it was like a curious nightmare, it wasn't real. Suppose you had found me, right after the war ended? You—you could easily have been disappointed, you could have easily fallen out of love. I, too! But because you didn't find me, because I was apparently lost to you, you built up all sorts of dreams and images about me. I'm not those dreams . . . I am not those images. I am myself! Not the same girl you knew ten long years ago. If I remembered you, and I did, of course, it was with the same dreamlike quality in remembering. How long did we know each other . . . two weeks, three weeks? Was that sufficient time upon which to base or risk the happiness of two lives?"

"You couldn't have thought so, you didn't try very hard—" he began, stubbornly. But, she saw, his color was beginning to return.

"To find you? I did try. I had my own life to live, Lorry, my own struggle to make. I thought you dead. I remembered you as dead. But I went on living. We have to go on living. Then—chance brought me here. But you have no right to blame your condition on me. All very well to fall in love with a girl in a few days' time and make a fetish of her memory. But there's more in life than that——"

"Than — fidelity?" he wanted to know.

"Was it fidelity to me as you remembered me, or a sort of fidelity of your vanity?" she flung at him. "You have made yourself into a legend of faithfulness . . . the few people who know speak about you in awed tones—your mother, a vital, glowing, wonderful woman with years of happiness before her, has sacrificed herself to that fidelity of yours. Suppose—suppose you had never gone back to the front that time, suppose the war had ended, then and there? How happy would we have been, I wonder.

"You can't ignore the fact that we are—married."

She had a wild impulse to cry out . . . Are we? Did you marry—her? Or is that part of your dream? Think! Try to remember! But she did not. She replied, merely:

"I do ignore it. I must. It is the only way to see light in this situation. I have your word. Your promise."

"I shall keep it," he said, heavily. "The day you come to me and tell me 'I admit your claim'—will be the first day I'll remind you of it. And if that day never comes, well, you can go free. We—we can get an annulment. But whether I am a fool or not to be faithful, I—I love you. Delight," said Lorrimer.

Her heart leaped suddenly, sickeningly. She steadied her voice and forced her eyes to his own.

"Do you?" she asked a great deal for the sake of clear thinking. "Do you love me as I now am, I wonder, or are you forcing yourself to—sentimentality because of the girl I once was, whose memory, admit it, must have faded now a little. I am not that girl, Lorry. Perhaps," said Mary Lou, "I never was."

"How you must hate me!" he said, involuntarily.

After a moment he said, thoughtfully:

"No, you're not that girl. That girl would never have spoken to me as you did just now. That girl didn't, perhaps, think very much. She just—was—as sunshine is, as flowers are. Remember that day at Richmond, Delight . . . ? I do . . . No; you are not that girl. But you are the girl I want . . ." he ended.

She did not answer. She was suddenly faintly sick, vaguely giddy, tired to death of her masquerade, very near to tears and knew not why.

A Fair Bargain

There was a little silence heavy with unspoken words.

"Look here," he said, suddenly, "we'll make a bargain, you and I. Always be honest with me. Promise you'll come to me if you find . . . that, after all, I am a little worthy of your caring . . . will you?"

She nodded. What else could she do?

"And I'll—" he tried to laugh—"I'll make an effort to 'snap out of it,' as suggested. I'll go with mother to that Christmas shindig of hers. And now," said Lorrimer, "shall we go look for the tree?"

She nodded again, and as he held out his hand, put her own within it. He held it a long moment, hard, fast.

Good-Looking?

"What was he like?" asked Mary Ellen regarding her big sister's "blind date."

Not Her Way

A little girl attending the Episcopal church for the first time was amazed to see all kneel down suddenly. She asked her mother what they were going to do. Her mother replied, "Hush, they're going to say their prayers."

"What, with all their clothes on?"

Prosperous

"Well, what's the matter with your husband?"

"Oh, doctor, I really don't know; I simply came home and found 'im lyin' prosperous on the floor!"

Warfare on Ants

Ants infecting house timbers, which have not been previously impregnated with creosote, may sometimes be reached and killed by the abundant use of kerosene injected by means of a syringe, or, where the timbers are accessible, by spraying or soaking them with kerosene. All timbers which have been mined and weakened should be replaced with timbers protected with creosote.

Real Dollar Bird

While the term "dollar bird" may be used as a slang name for the American eagle, the real dollar bird is an Australian roller, prevailing blue and black in plumage. It is so called from the large roundish spot of white on its wings, shown in flight.

"MAKE-BELIEVE" by FAITH BALDWIN

Copyright, 1930, by Faith Baldwin Distributed by King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Mary Lou Thurston, beautiful orphan, seeks a position in the home of wealthy Mrs. Margaret Lorrimer, when the latter's son, Travers, a shell-shocked war veteran, enters. At sight of Mary Lou he becomes wildly excited, takes her in his arms and calls her "Delight" and "wife." Later, Mrs. Lorrimer explains that Travers has mistaken Mary Lou for Delight Harford, whom he claims he married in England, but of whom no record can be found. Mrs. Lorrimer persuades Mary Lou to assume the role of Delight to help Travers regain his health. Travers is told that, as Delight was so young at the time of her marriage and had since thought him dead, they must start all over again. In her first encounter with Travers Mary Lou plays her part perfectly. Travers takes new interest in life. Mrs. Lorrimer hopes he will fall in love with Mary Lou. Travers believing Larry Mitchell, Mary Lou's friend, is in love with her, reminds Mary Lou that she is still his wife. At Christmas Travers' lack of the holiday spirit causes Mary Lou to call him ingrown and selfish.

CHAPTER XXIII.

"HOW you must hate me!" he said, involuntarily, almost in a whisper.

"I don't hate you," she flung back at him. "If I did I wouldn't take all this trouble! If I did—well, you wouldn't see me again, that's all! But it makes me tired, now that I've lived here in the house all these weeks and seen—what I've seen. Even if you can't really enter into your mother's plans for Christmas you might at least pretend a little—it couldn't hurt you and it would make her happy!"

"I suppose," Lorrimer answered after a moment, and he was perfectly white, so white that Mary Lou's heart misgave her. What if she had overstepped the limit! She and Mrs. Lorrimer and Doctor Mathews had often talked over the possible wisdom of giving Lorrimer a shock, of trying to shock him back to himself by sheer brutality of truth. But how white he was! "I suppose," he repeated, "you think me a pretty poor specimen. And naturally I'm not fool enough to think that my experience was worse than any other man's, nor as bad as that of many. But if I've become 'ingrown,' as you call it, why a lot of it was up to you—if I didn't care to get well, didn't care if I lived or died—it was considerably your fault," said Lorrimer.

"Mine," cried Mary Lou, almost forgetting her role for a moment. "Mine?"

All That Matters

"I loved you," he said somberly, "and you told me you loved me. I took that knowledge back to the front with me; it sustained me through all that happened afterward, through the long weeks in the prison camp. The knowledge of your love. That you belonged to me. That after it was all over we would be together again. For always."

Mary Lou thought hard and fast. Then she let him have it, her own Mary Lou-ish convictions, her complete and truthful opinion of the boy and girl love affair. She spoke in the person of Delight Harford, but whether the real Delight would have harbored such opinions Mary Lou neither knew nor cared.

"Look here, Lorry," she said, evenly, "we'll have this out . . . here and now. How old were you when we met? How old was I? A couple of crazy kids, thrown out of our normal stride by war, beglamoured and bewildered. You were in a dangerous service, you'd had months of it, your number might be up at any time. I—I lived in an atmosphere of war-mad desperation, frivolity, despair, sorrow, hectic gayety, alternating like moods. An epidemic, an air raid and my number might be up, too. Anyone was bound to fall in love, almost everyone did. You'd have fallen for the first pretty girl you saw after your weeks at the front, and I with the first presentable man. And we were full of a lot of romantic ideas about snatching at happiness, because the next day might be our last—" She paused for breath and to her astonishment Lorrimer nodded.

"Yes, you said just that," he told her, now. "I haven't forgotten, Delight."

War Madness

"That's how we all felt. It was—madness, it was like a curious nightmare, it wasn't real. Suppose you had found me, right after the war ended? You —you could easily have been disappointed, you could have easily fallen out of love. I, too! But because you didn't find me, because I was apparently lost to you, you built up all sorts of dreams and images about me. I'm not those dreams . . . I am not those images. I am myself! Not the same girl you knew ten long years ago. If I remembered you, and I did, of course, it was with the same dreamlike quality in remembering. How long did we know each other . . . two weeks, three weeks? Was that sufficient time upon which to base or risk the happiness of two lives?"

"You couldn't have thought so, you didn't try very hard—" he began, stubbornly. But, she saw, his color was beginning to return.

"To find you? I did try. I had my own life to live, Lorry, my own struggle to make. I thought you dead. I remembered you as dead. But I went on living. We have to go on living. Then—chance brought me here. But you have no right to blame your condition on me. All very well to fall in love with a girl in a few days' time and make a fetish of her memory. But there's more in life than that——"

"Than — fidelity?" he wanted to know.

"Was it fidelity to me as you remembered me, or a sort of fidelity of your vanity?" she flung at him. "You have made yourself into a legend of faithfulness . . . the few people who know speak about you in awed tones—your mother, a vital, glowing, wonderful woman with years of happiness before her, has sacrificed herself to that fidelity of yours. Suppose—suppose you had never gone back to the front that time, suppose the war had ended, then and there? How happy would we have been, I wonder.

"You can't ignore the fact that we are—married."

She had a wild impulse to cry out . . . Are we? Did you marry—her? Or is that part of your dream? Think! Try to remember! But she did not. She replied, merely:

"I do ignore it. I must. It is the only way to see light in this situation. I have your word. Your promise."

"I shall keep it," he said, heavily. "The day you come to me and tell me 'I admit your claim'—will be the first day I'll remind you of it. And if that day never comes, well, you can go free. We—we can get an annulment. But whether I am a fool or not to be faithful, I—I love you. Delight," said Lorrimer.

Her heart leaped suddenly, sickeningly. She steadied her voice and forced her eyes to his own.

"Do you?" she asked a great deal for the sake of clear thinking. "Do you love me as I now am, I wonder, or are you forcing yourself to—sentimentality because of the girl I once was, whose memory, admit it, must have faded now a little. I am not that girl, Lorry. Perhaps," said Mary Lou, "I never was."

"How you must hate me!" he said, involuntarily.

After a moment he said, thoughtfully:

"No, you're not that girl. That girl would never have spoken to me as you did just now. That girl didn't, perhaps, think very much. She just—was—as sunshine is, as flowers are. Remember that day at Richmond, Delight...? I do...No; you are not that girl. But you are the girl I want . . ." he ended.

She did not answer. She was suddenly faintly sick, vaguely giddy, tired to death of her masquerade, very near to tears and knew not why.

A Fair Bargain

There was a little silence heavy with unspoken words.

"Look here," he said, suddenly, "we'll make a bargain, you and I. Always be honest with me. Promise you'll come to me if you find... that, after all, I am a little worthy of your caring...will you?"

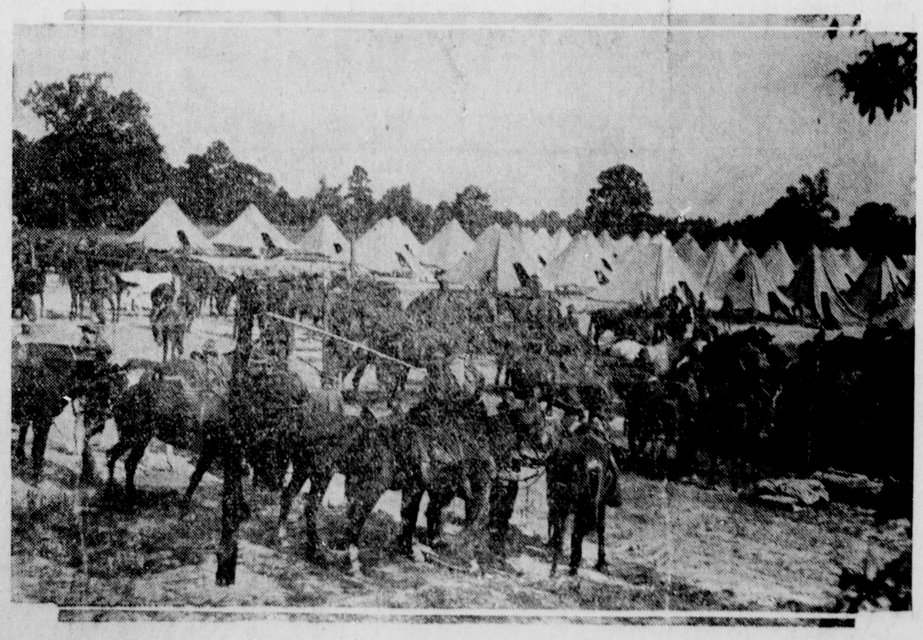

She nodded. What else could she do?

"And I'll—" he tried to laugh—"I'll make an effort to 'snap out of it,' as suggested. I'll go with mother to that Christmas shindig of hers. And now," said Lorrimer, "shall we go look for the tree?"

She nodded again, and as he held out his hand, put her own within it. He held it a long moment, hard, fast.

"Yes, he's so keen for dough and such a swell loafer it looks as if he would rise in the business."—Pathfinder.

KNOWS HIS FORTUNE

Bill—"Have you ever had anyone tell your fortune?" Tom—"Yes; my wife often tells me the amount of money I have to the cent."

Good for Daddy

"Well, Joan, you have a baby brother!"

"Oh, doctor, I'm so glad! Daddy was getting so girlish with just mother and me about."

Education by Example

"Do you think the modern theater is educational in its influence?"

"It is," replied Mr. Stormington Barnes, "for anybody who happens to be taking dancing lessons."

Warfare on Ants

Ants infecting house timbers, which have not been previously impregnated with creosote, may sometimes be reached and killed by the abundant use of kerosene injected by means of a syringe, or, where the timbers are accessible, by spraying or soaking them with kerosene. All timbers which have been mined and weakened should be replaced with timbers protected with creosote.

Real Dollar Bird

While the term "dollar bird" may be used as a slang name for the American eagle, the real dollar bird is an Australian roller, prevailing blue and black in plumage. It is so called from the large roundish spot of white on its wings, shown in flight.
